(A LETTER SIGNED "Frank Doman," carrying at the top of the page the address "Doman and Company, 32 Broadway, New York, telephone Digby 4-5286," contains quotations from this column predicting cheaper money and advising wise investment of money before it gets cheaper. The letter then goes on to suggest investment in a certain mining stock at six cents a share.

The writer of this column, quoted by the stock sellers, knows nothing about them or their stock. His name is used in their stock-selling enterprise without his authority or previous knowledge.)

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S mother had tea yesterday afternoon with Queen Mary at Buckingham Palace, in the Queen's private apartments that few American women have seen. Nobody knows what was said by the two most estemiable grandmothers.

No doubt Mrs. Roosevelt told Queen Mary a great deal about "the most wonderful son in the world," Franklin Delano. Mrs. Roosevelt might have said truly to the wife of the British King and Emperor, "My son has more power, and USES more power than any ruler on earth, not excepting your fine husband, King George."

IT IS PROBABLE, however, that Mrs. Roosevelt didn't say all that she might have said about her son because King George also had tea, and she would fear to hurt his feelings by invidious comparisons.

If she had asked the King he would have told her that he would not for a great deal carry the load that her son has on his shoulders, or take the responsibility of making such gigantic public expenditures while reorganizing a big nation's business, industry, finances, hours, wages and commercial morals.

GENE TUNNEY, retired heavyweight boxing champion of the world, wise enough to retire before anybody had a chance to take his championship from him, rejoices in the possession of a second son, weight 8½ pounds. Proudly it is announced that the baby, before it was five minutes old, "aimed a punch at the nurse." Nothing more amiable than a fond father.

THE TUNNEY BABY was gently received, compared with ancient babies that used to be dipped, at birth, in ice cold water in wintertime. If they survived, well and good; if not, they were not worth keeping anyhow.

The father of Henry the Fourth's mother, when his grandson came, handed the mother a gold box full of jewels, saying, "this is for you," took the newborn baby, saying, "this is for me," and promptly moistened the baby's lips with strong burgundy wine and rubbed garlic on the little mouth "to make him a man."

Henry the Fourth survived that and had a good time until Ravaillac murdered him.

NEXT THURSDAY President Roosevelt, "on the air," will tell you what he has done, and what he hopes to do. The following Saturday he sails for Hawaii to get away from work and noise for a rest. At the coming election, so far as he is concerned, you may vote as you please. He will take no part in that election. If you do not like Democrats, you may vote for a Republican. In any case, President Roosevelt will continue carrying out his plans.

IT IS SAFE to say that while the government continues able to pour out money for jobs, relief, building loans, farrow sows, smaller crops, bigger postoffices, there will not be many Republican votes.

Times have changed since the government was wondering whether it could afford two or three hundred million dollars to build the Panama Canal, which paid for itself, and will continue paying forever.

Now a drought comes, and the government sets aside five hundred million dollars to comfort the sufferers.

IN NEW YORK, a chauffeur asked his boss to find a job for the chauffeur's brother. A job was found at twenty-five dollars a week driving a truck. The jobless brother said indignantly:

"What! Drive a truck for twenty-five dollars a week when I can get fifteen dollars a week from the government for doing nothing? No thank you."

That can last a long time, if the government is willing to print the money. It may last not quite so long, but several years, if the government continues its present asinine course of inflating with bonds, doubling its debt by payment of interest.

ON THE Far Rockaway branch of the Long Island Railroad, passengers saw a small dog touch the highly-charged "third rail" and rise yelping into the air. Indignant, the dog rushed back at the rail, biting it. More yelping. A third time the dog returned to the attack, even a third shock did not kill, and he went elsewhere.

As the small dog treated the third rail, so "civilized" nations treat the highly charged war danger. But, unfortunately, they don't know enough to stay away after three tries. Half the nations in Europe, and some in Asia, may be back biting that same old third war rail in a short time.

WHEN YOU BUY a silk dress, make sure that the silk is not "weighted" with lead to make it seem heavier, finer material. Miss Kissinger, at the Pennsylvania State College, kept rats one hour a day for ten weeks in sacks made of lead-weighted silk. They all died. Dressed in silk, weighted with other metals, tin for instance, the rats throve.

MISS ALICE MARBLE.

ILL TENNIS STAR TO CROON LOVE

By DOROTHY ROE
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Alice Marble, young California tennis star who was forced out of the Wightman Cup matches because of illness, is going to desert tennis for radio crooning for the next six months.

Disconsolate over the pleurisy attack which caused her recent collapse during a match in Paris, Miss Marble, who returned on the Aquitania Friday, was leaving New York today for San Francisco, a rest cure and some concentrated work on limpid notes for the air waves.

Alice has already made her debut on the air, and has devoted her spare time to voice lessons. She said:

"I sing whenever I get a chance and I'm seriously interested in a musical career aside from tennis."

Janet Gaynor Denies Motherhood Reports

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—(Universal.)—Published reports stating Janet Gaynor is the mother of a secret 3-year-old child by her divorced husband, Lydell Peck, were vigorously denied today by the film star and officials of the studio where she is employed. Miss Gaynor declined to issue a personal statement, but joined the denial issued by the studio, branding the report as "absurd and untrue."

NORMA QUITS TEARS; CASE NEAR END

Slayer's 'Doll Bride' Regains Composure After Grilling

DEDHAM, Mass., June 27.—(AP.)—Testimony was concluded in the trial of Norma Millen today.

George A. Douglas, attorney for the defense, immediately began his final argument.

Norma, charged with being an accessory after the fact of the robbery of the Needham Trust Company and the slaying of two policemen who fell there, was on the stand for less than an hour today, completing her re-direct examination at the hands of her attorney, George A. Douglas, and answering a few final questions of the prosecutor, Edmund R. Dewing.

The chic, 19-year-old daughter of a former clergyman gladly left the stand, where she had been questioned for more than two days.

CENTER OF ROOM

As the arguments began she took her customary seat in the center of the courtroom, a blue coat thrown loosely about her shoulders.

Douglas, square jawed, with peppered hair, strode in front of the jury box as he delivered his summation, his heavy voice booming across the crowded courtroom.

Norma, who wept and had to be assisted from the stand several times during the past two days, bore up well under the questioning this morning, but the tautness of her face seemed to fade a little as she left the stand for the last time.

WHAT? NO DOLLS?

Her husband, Murton Millen; his brother, Irving, and Abe Faber recently were convicted of murder in the first degree in connection with the slaying of one of the policemen.

The defense had stressed that Norma had a mind much younger than her years and that she had a childishness for dolls.

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing closed dramatically with the question:

"And it is true that in all the clothing found in your apartment and in your luggage in New York and Washington there were no dolls?"

She said:

"Yes."

Man Bites Sleuth Hunting for Robbers

Objecting to being awakened to be questioned concerning a robbery, Newton Pender, 24, of 530 Armandale street, bit City Detective George Puff in the leg in West Park, North Side, early today, police reported.

Puff, Detective Capt. Harvey Clayton and Detective Edward Kramer were seeking suspects in a series of recent North Side robberies and were questioning men in the park.

Epic of 15 Bucks' Worth of Potent MockingBirdFood

Michael Malroana saw victory in the offing today in his long and courageous battle to collect 15 bucks from the city of Pittsburgh for mocking-bird food.

Michael's is a story of doggedness, of persistence. It has been almost three years since the city bought the food for mocking biffs at the Highland Park Zoo from his pet shop.

But has he been paid? No. He went to Controller J. P. Kerr and he went to Supplies Director W. R. Dunlap and he went to a friend and Controller Kerr made an investigation. But Michael got nothing.

So he sued. He sued the city for 15 bucks. And today, before Alderman A. M. Maloney, Michael told his story. The city was defended in this litigation by Assistant Solicitor William A. Stewart.

Mr. Malroana complained that the real reason for his frustration was A. J. Schaumann, head keeper of the zoo. Mr. Malroana said that Schaumann used to be a competitor of his and didn't want him to get along.

So, the plaintiff averred, not until his mocking-bird food was spoiled was he notified that it wasn't satisfactory.

And what was wrong with the mocking-bird food? Well, according to Michael, somebody with the city said there wasn't enough zwieback in it. To this Michael retorts with a laugh, there was plenty of all it takes—and it takes plenty.

Solicitor Stewart admitted that he was slightly perplexed by this legal maneuver. He explained that he thought he was defending the city against something else.

HITLER BOWS AS POWER WANES

Nazi Forced to Yield To War Vet Rivals Of Storm Troops

BERLIN, June 27.—(AP.)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler today assured Franz Seldte, minister of labor and founder and leader of the war veterans' organization—the Steel Helmet—that the veterans' body will not be dissolved.

The Chancellor immediately sent an order to Col. Ernst Roehm, chief of staff of the Nazi Storm Troopers, that attacks by the Storm Troopers in word or deed on the Steel Helmeters must cease.

Hitler's orders followed a controversy between the veterans on the one hand and the militant Nazis on the other.

Because the meeting of the Steel Helmeters in the government district of Arnsberg "showed thoroughly anti-Nazi tendencies," the state police issued the decree forbidding until further notice all public Steel Helmet meetings within the Arensberg area as well as the wearing of Steel Helmet uniforms or badges in public.

STORM TROOP PROBLEM

At the same time rumors spread that there would be a whole or partial disbanding of the Nazi Storm Troops in the interests of Germany's foreign policy resulting from an order to the troopers to lay off their familiar brown shirts and get back to civilian clothes for the July vacation period.

Chancellor Hitler was believed to be facing one of the most perplexing problems of his career in the present necessity of deciding what to do with his loyal Storm Troop forces, estimated at nearly 3,000,000 men.

Political circles said they regarded the Storm Troops as a bur-

BARS SAWED IN WEST VA. GETAWAY

Officer Dies on Way to Hospital, Fugitives Flee to Woods

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 27.—Smashing a jailer's head with an iron bar so viciously that he died five hours later, three prisoners fled from the Braxton County Jail at Sutton shortly before 1 o'clock this morning.

Although 50 officers and citizens were seeking them in the surrounding hills, the fugitives were still at large this afternoon.

The slain officer is Earl (Turtle) Bland, 54, of Sutton, storekeeper and former theater owner, who became a jailer a few months ago.

The men who escaped are Camden Roode, alias Harvey E. Hall, 30, of near Frametown, serving a term for an escape from the road gang some months ago; Raymond Mace, 19, of Chemical, charged with robbery, and Elliott Keener, 18, farm laborer, of Dane, Webster County, charged with stealing a horse from his employer.

BARS SAWED

Using a saw which probably had been smuggled into them within the last few days, the prisoners sawed two bars from the "bull pen" in which they were imprisoned.

Just how the attack on Jailer Bland was made may never be known. He may have been asleep on his cot just outside the corridor. He was struck down by one of the pieces of bar sawed from the corridor. His skull was fracture.

The prisoners tied Bland's hands behind his back. When he was found, he was clad only in his underwear. Whether he had removed the garments himself, or whether he was stripped by the prisoners, is not known.

The three took Bland's keys, unlocked the outer doors of the jail and fled.

WOMAN AROUSED

Upstairs in the Sheriffs' residence the Sheriff's wife, Mrs. Ella Rollison, was awakened by a sound from the lower part of the building. She aroused her husband. Sheriff Rollison said it probably was 20 minutes from the time his wife first heard the noise until he arrived downstairs and found Bland unconscious on the floor.

The injured man was given an X-ray examination, and when it was discovered how serious his hurt was, he was placed in an ambulance and brought to St. Mary's Hospital in Clarksburg. He died just as the ambulance reached the hospital.

Sheriff Rollison attempted to get blood hounds from Camden-on-Gauley, but found them to be sick. All state, county and district officers were notified. Sheriff Rollinson roused citizens and urged them to form posses to scour the hills for the murderers.

Prior to becoming a guard at the local jail, Bland's only experience as an officer had been as a special policeman for the town of Sutton several years ago.

Whiteman Goes West For Mother's Funeral

WARDEN ADMITS FREEING ORIOL

BEAVER, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—Thompson Bradshaw, attorney for Warden Hamilton M. Brown, of the Beaver County Jail, told Judge Frank E. Reader at a hearing today he conceded the warden was "justifiably criticized" for releasing a prisoner from jail to do political work.

Asking leniency, the attorney declared a fine and "a short suspension" of the warden would "constitute a burden that would truly be a punishment."

The warden faced possible removal or suspension from office on charges he permitted John Oriol, serving a two-to-ten year term for arson, to leave the jail on May 12 and remain away un-

Harriman Sentenced To 4½ Years in Prison

Aged Banker Calm, Appears Resigned To Fate

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Joseph W. Harriman, former president of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company, was sentenced to four and one-half years in prison today on a conviction of causing false entries in the books of the bank.

Harriman was convicted by a Federal Court jury last Tuesday on 16 counts of an indictment charging falsification of the bank's records and misapplication of funds of the bank.

Execution of his sentence was stayed until next Tuesday morning to permit him to apply to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for a further stay.

Before pronouncing sentence, Judge Knox ended a long explanation with these words:

"Each of us in the face of adversity must stand steadfast, and this message must go to everyone in a position of public trust."

The former banker and his family took the sentence calmly and appeared resigned to it.

Before sentence was pronounced regarding the condition of Harriman, who is 67. One said he would not be able to stand exercise and that the ordinary rigors of prison life might result in a serious heart attack. The other testified the banker was suffering from deterioriation of the central nervous system.

Harriman's attorney addressing the court, said:

"I ask you to bear in mind this man was a respectable citizen for 50 years, until adversity came upon him, his health failed and the depression came. It was as an ill man that he carried on while these events occurred. He denied under oath and still denies he made or caused to be made any of these false entries.

"I ask the court to bear in mind he lost his position, his bank and everything that he had. Others lost, it is true, but he is the greatest loser of them all."

Milton Work Succumbs At 69

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—(AP.)—Milton C. Work, 69, instructor and advisor to millions in the international realm of auction and contract bridge, died early today in a Philadelphia hospital.

The Philadelphia card expert, who gave up a promising law career to find a fortune in popular interpretation of the laws of bridge, fell victim to intestinal disorders that harried him for months.

He was first stricken at Reading, Pa., while playing in the open pair Eastern Pennsylvania contract bridge championship tournament last October. Recovered sufficiently to return to his Rittenhouse Square apartment, he continued to play his favorite game until he was last taken ill several weeks ago.

His first book on bridge came out in 1913. The list of titles of his later works, numbering more than a score, is an outline history of the growing popularity of the game and the swing from auction to contract.

When contract became popular, Work originated the "official system," with the "two club force" as a prominent innovation.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Hazlehurst Work, and two step-children, Mrs. William W. Barber, Jr., of South Borough, Mass., and Henry H. Patton, Philadelphia.

Police Withdraw Guard for Consul

The police guard at the Emerson Apartments, in Emerson street, where John Loibl, German consul, lives, had been withdrawn today. The guard was placed there after Communistic delegations had petitioned him to ask Germany's President von Hindenberg for the release of Ernst Thaelman, Communist leader in Germany.

2, HEART SICK, TRY SUICIDE

Life didn't mean much to the girl whose sweetheart was murdered, nor to the boy whose bride left him.

So they both tried to end it all, the police reported.

Anna Boback, 19, felt frustrated when her sweetheart, Charles Torin, 21, died after he was shot when gunmen held up his father's store at 2412 Center avenue Saturday night.

So she swallowed poison in her home in Ceredo way, the police reported. She was rushed to St. John's Hospital. She had taken a large dose, which probably saved her life, for it served as an emetic.

In more serious condition was 18-year-old Charles Wise, who, the police said, shot himself in his home at 336 Island avenue, McKees Rocks, when his bride, Alice, 18, stormed home to her parents.

His bride heard the news. And, with as much haste as that in which she left, she hurried from her parents' home in McCoy road to Ohio Valley Hospital and the bedside of the boy she married a year ago.

Wales, Dutch Princess Linked in NewRomance

LONDON, June 27.—(AP.)—Matchmakers who have been worrying about the single state of the Prince of Wales had something new to talk about today.

Wales, who turned 40 Saturday without so much as an inkling that he was even thinking of matrimony, attended a dinner dance last night at the Dutch Legation in honor of Princess Juliana of Holland, who is in London for the season.

The Prince and the Princess, who is 25, have been linked in marriage rumors before. For that matter, both have been mentioned by matchmakers with nearly every royal house containing an eligible.

Recent rumors linked Princess Juliana with Prince Bertil, of Sweden, but the Swedish Legation in London issued a denial.

Princess Juliana, the daughter of Queen Wilhelmina and in direct succession to the throne, is noted in Holland for her democracy. She is a talented artist and also specialized in international law at the University of Leyden.

In appearance she is tall and inclined toward heaviness.

Eileen to Sail for Europe As Astor Weds Ellen

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—While young John Jacob Astor is being married Saturday, his former fiancee, who broke her engagement to him, will be on her way to Europe.

Eileen Gillespie, who gave back his $250,000 engagement ring in return for an apology, will sail on the liner Leviathan an hour before Ellen Tuck French, who was to have been her bridesmaid, dons Astor's wedding ring.

That is, if the present plans of her parents, the Lawrence Lewis Gillespies, materialize, Mrs. Gillespie said:

"We have reservations on the Leviathan, and we plan to sail then. But we may possibly wait until next week."

Trips to Europe have played a prominent part in the Astor-Gillespie-French drama.

Astor sought foreign shores—a "heart-mending" round-the-world trip, when Miss Gillespie cancelled her engagement.

They had planned to visit Europe as a wedding trip.

It was on his return from his "heart mending" European trip that Astor was quoted as blaming "parental interference."

COUNTY CALLS PUBLIC HEARING IN TUBE TOLL DISPUTE

HOPE FOR PART OF U. S. LOAN IF PARLEY FAILS

Officials Say PWA May Grant Portion Of Fund Sought

A public hearing in which representatives of communities or groups who oppose the projected toll on the Liberty Tubes are invited to meet with the County Commissioners, has been slated for tomorrow afternoon.

The meeting will be held in the Commissioners' meeting room in the Court House.

What the Commissioners will tell the protestants concerning the $30,000,000 loan from the federal government they would not say.

C. C. McGovern, chairman of the board, said:

"The meeting will be public, or I won't be there. But I haven't gone into the thing with the other Commissioners as yet."

CLAIRTON PROTEST

They invited, however, Clairton's Mayor and City Council, or their representative to attend, after a letter of protest was read at the Commissioners' meeting yesterday.

In the letter the Clairton officials termed the tolls on the tubes "discriminatory," since, they wrote, it was a main artery of Clairton people to downtown Pittsburgh.

However, others came forward with the hope that the Commissioners would assume payment of the Public Works loan. The building of a new tunnel and bridge would open the way for the building of 15,000 new homes in Banksville, Greentree and nearby communities, it was said.

Some county officials have hopes that the Federal government, dropping the problem of the Liberty Tubes tolls, may grant $14,000,000 of the project. This would chop off the $10,000,000 which would build the new tunnel and furnish the South Hills improvements which the tolls from the Liberty and the new tubes would make possible.

CITE HOLLAND TUNNEL TOLL

One official explained:

"There are only two great vehicular tunnels in the East—the Holland in New York and the Liberty Tubes here. It costs 50 cents to go through the Holland tubes. Maybe it is too much to expect that the South Hills should have two of the three great vehicular tunnels of the country."

County officials, who have spent many months preparing the plans and making the arrangements for the entire plan, getting its legal and financial approval from the state and nation, were disgruntled and depressed over the rejection of their plans by the South Hills groups.

One said:

"The people called the Bigelow boulevard, Bigelow's Folly, and the Boulevard of the Allies the Swooning Boulevard. But the people's voice, to any one in public office, is the last word."

M'NAIR RENEWS TOLL ATTACK

Mayor McNair, continuing his attack upon the proposal to charge tolls at the Liberty Tubes, told a meeting in Morningside School last night that civic organizations worked for 20 years to rid the district of toll bridges.

He also pointed out that a ramp and plaza necessary to collect the tolls would cost $1,500,000, and added that the $1,700 income from such tolls would come out of the pockets of South Side and South Hills merchants.

WARDEN ADMITS FREEING ORIOL

til May 15, the day of the Pennsylvania primary.

An investigating commission appointed by Judge Reader reported Oriol had done political work in his home city of Ambridge during the time of his release.

Bradshaw expressed the attitude that, while Warden Brown had made a mistake in the Oriol incident, he should not be dismissed "for his first and only transgression." The attorney said Brown had a good record of management over a period of seven years.

Ten or 12 character witnesses took the stand in Brown's behalf.

Judge Reader took the case under advisement, saying he probably would hand down a decision in a few days.

Youth Hurls Brick In Downing Street

LONDON, June 27.—(AP.)—A youth of about 24 heaved a brick through a front window of Number 11 Downing Street today while the cabinet was in session at Number 10.

He entered the street with the brick wrapped in brown paper, slipped past Scotland Yard detectives on duty in the section, but made no effort to escape after throwing the missile. His grievance was not learned.

NEW FARM BILL VETO LOOMS

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Congressional leaders said today they had been informed President Roosevelt would veto the Frazier-Lemke bill granting a partial moratorium for six years on paying off farm mortgages.

Attorney General Cummings yesterday submitted a report to the President on the constitutionality of the measure passed during the closing hours of the recent session of Congress.

The bill would permit farmers to scale down their indebtedness and retain possession of their properties for six years at a rate of one per cent interest on the reappraised value of their lands.

Working until 1 o'clock this morning, Mr. Roosevelt signed 124 measures. He later acted upon 15 more.

TUGWELL RAPS NEW DEAL FOES

DES MOINES, June 27.—(AP.)—Rexford G. Tugwell accused certain big businesses today of trying to wreck the New Deal program for "social management" of agriculture.

Fresh from his Senate victory over foes who called him radical, the Undersecretary of Agriculture Swung into the farm belt in the vanguard of a number of high officials who will expound Roosevelt policies to the country before the fall elections.

Some firms dealing in farm products he hit is inimical to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. He arraigned big canners, packers, millers and milk distributors for their opposition to the now famous "lost amendments" to the AAA.

The agriculture administration asked the last Congress to pass amendments described as clarifying the licensing powers of this recovery unit. Opposition sprang up, denouncing the move as an attempt to hand a czar's power to Secretary Wallace, and the amendments died.

WEIRTON BOMB CHARGES FILED

WELLSBURG, W. Va., June 27.—(AP.)—Two Weirton Steel Company watchmen sentenced on firearms charges face additional charges of dynamiting the entrance to a meeting room of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

Warrants for the arrest of Harold Smith and William Meadows, the watchmen, were issued yesterday, charging them with placing the dynamite at the union hall entrance late Monday night. The blast caused damage estimated at $500.

Smith and Meadows were arrested several hours after the blast in an automobile which police said contained dynamite and several pistols.

Magistrate George Howard sentenced each to six months in jail and a fine of $500 yesterday for possession of the firearms. Bonds which they posted pending an appeal were rejected because of previous liens which had been placed against the bondsman's property.

ALUMINUM CODE APPROVED FOR 90-DAY TRIAL

Gen. Johnson to Probe Complaints Charging Mellon Monopoly

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Hugh S. Johnson today approved an NRA code for the aluminum industry for a 90-day trial period to begin July 11, to determine the extent it operates free "from any alleged oppression or discrimination."

The Aluminum Company of America, a Mellon concern, is a major factor in the industry.

Johnson explained the approval was made for 90 days only in view of objections which had been raised to the code. These included assertions of a monopoly by Mellon aluminum interests.

During the 90-day period, Johnson said he would receive and investigate "complaints of unfair competition in the sale of products at prices constituting unfair competition, of oppressing small enterprises or tending toward monopoly."

The code provides a 40-hour maximum work week of not more than six days a week with seasonal allowances. Child labor is prohibited with 16 years as the minimum for office work and 18 years in production.

An 11-member code authority is created. Each board member must represent a commodity division of the industry and no member of the industry may have more than four representatives on the board.

Producers are prohibited from discriminating in price between their own subsidiaries and independent fabricators, but there is no bar against domestic producers meeting prices quoted on imported aluminum.

The following statement was issued by the Pittsburgh office of the Aluminum Company of America following the signing of the aluminum code:

"The signing of the basic code for the aluminum industry in Washington will not affect existing wage rates now being paid by Aluminum Company of America. The rates we are paying are established by the 'going' rates in each of the communities in which we have plants and these are higher in many instances than the minimum wage rates specified in the basic code."

TIGHE EXPECTS STEEL PEACE ASSURANCE

Word From Roosevelt Waited as Union Holds Parley

Confidence that a steel strike would be averted by action of President Roosevelt was expressed this afternoon by President M. F. Tighe, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, as annual wage conferences with independent steel companies opened here.

Tighe said he expected to hear from Washington "at any time," and added:

"We expect news certainly before President Roosevelt goes on his vacation."

Tighe said the men were anxious to hear from Washington but were willing to wait a few days.

The wage conferences being held at the William Penn Hotel with the Western Sheet and Tin Plate Manufacturers' Association had no significance on the labor controversy existing between the workers and companies which refuse to recognize the Amalgamated, Tighe said.

The sheet and tin plate association, comprised of eight independent companies, has been dealing with the Amelgamated for 35 years, Tighe stated. A return to working conditions and wages which were in force before the depression will be asked at the parley, he said.

Roosevelt Names Board To Settle Dock Strike

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt used his new labor disputes power for the first time to broach a settlement today of the Pacific Coast longshoremen's strike.

A three-man board was named last night, in an executive order defining its powers and duties, to make a thorough investigation of the longshoremen's strike and its causes.

Instructions to the board were accepted in labor circles as a forecast of how the administration may deal with other major disputes.

The President named the Rt. Rev. Edward J. Hanna, O. K. Cushing, San Francisco attorney, and Edward F. McGrady, assistant Secretary of Labor, to the board.

Plans now maturing call for a central labor agency, probably to replace the National Labor Board, with special boards to handle other important cases. Mr. Roosevelt was expected to issue an executive order to carry it out within a day or two.

Call Strike Truce To Ship Race Plane

SAN PEDRO, Cal., June 27.—(AP.)—A group of longshoremen broke their strike long enough to load on the steamship Mariposa an airplane which Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, noted British transoceanic flier, will use in the London-Melbourne race next October.

Kingsford-Smith sails today aboard the Mariposa for Australia, where he will tune up the plane for a flight to England. It was built in Burbank, Cal.

Her Pay Held Up

BETTE DAVIS

BETTE 'DOCKED' FOR WALKOUT

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—(AP.)—Bette Davis, blonde film star, is under temporary suspension at Warner Brothers studio for walking out on an assignment, it was disclosed today.

She had objected to roles offered her and particularly one in "The Case of the Howling Dog," it was said. Her manager, M. C. Levee, was to confer with Warner officials today to seek an adjustment.

Miss Davis finds herself much in the same position as George Brent when he walked out. The company suspended him, took an option on his contract and continued to keep him without pay until an agreement was reached. Miss Davis' name is on the payroll, but she receives no pay.

JAIL HIGHTOWER IN HILL RIOT

The Rev. A. V. B. Hightower, crusading Negro preacher, of the Hill, and former candidate for Council, was committed to jail today in default of $1,500 bond on a surety of the peace charge.

The charge grew out of the near-riot Saturday when Hightower, who also heads the Highland Yard Detective Agency, attempted to serve a gambling warrant on Herman Dickson, 1541 Center avenue.

In Alderman Thomas M. Geary's office, where the charge was filed by Harry Pittler, of 70 Roberts street, Hightower said:

"I have nothing to lose and everything to gain for myself and the public. I'll fight to the finish."

He said he had filed charges of inciting to riot against seven persons alleged to have figured in the attack on him. They will have a hearing Friday before Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson, of Mt. Lebanon.

On the basis of unofficial returns from all but 108 of the state's 1,288 precincts, the vote was: Trammell, 96,654; Pepper, 91,916.

COLUMBUS, O., June 27.—(AP.)—The Federal Court has appointed Isaac M. Scott, of Pittsburgh, and Garrett B. Levan, of Steubenville, O., as ancillary receivers to serve with George B. Ladd in the Follansbee Brothers Company receivership.

BULLETS PERIL 6 IN FAYETTE MINE FEUD

Brotherhood Member Target for Five In Auto

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 27.—Half a dozen lives were menaced early today when a barrage of 30 shots were fired at the home of Joseph Wargo, brotherhood miner, at Merrittstown, 10 miles from here.

The attack, which police believe is another outbreak of the fight between the two rival unions, occurred shortly after midnight as Wargo and his 10-year-old son, Joseph, laid out on the grass, trying to escape the heat.

Wargo says he saw a car draw up to the house and one of the auto's five occupants said:

"Give it to him now."

The firing started before Wargo could rush into the house and get his rifle. In the front bedroom, two other children were already in bed. When the shots began crashing through the windows, they jumped out and hid behind the bed.

Three other brotherhood miners, David Whoorery, Pat Leyhew and John Varnoski, boarders, were also in the house.

Vernoski said that earlier in the evening while on his way to the Wargo home, six men tried to waylay him on the railroad tracks, but he outran them.

The attack occurred exactly one month to a day after a scrimmage between Wargo and another miner, said to be a United Mine Worker, who was shot and taken to Brownsville Hospital, Brownsville.

State police and Fayette County detectives are investigating. They found virtually every window in the front of the house had been shot out, they reported.

SEEK TO SETTLE MINE STRIKE

Settlement of the strike of 550 miners at the Allegheny-Pittsburgh Coal Company mine at Logan's Ferry was being sought today.

Officials of the United Mine Workers of America, who say the walkout was not sanctioned by the miners' organization, attempted to arrange a conference between the strikers and the company officials.

Only three men entered the pit this morning under guard of deputy sheriffs. A picket line with two American flags in front was formed, but there was no disorder.

The mine closed May 23 when the company is said to have refused to dismiss C. F. Reynolds, superintendent, whom the men charged was "inhumane and unreasonable." It was reopened Monday. Only a few returned.

The striking miners planned to meet tonight in Polish Falcons' Hall, New Kensington.

ARMY AUTO BID PLOT DENIED

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Norman K. Haig, General Motors official, termed "absolutely false" today charges made to a House Committee that he suggested a "get-together" of General Motors, Ford and Chrysler bidders for a "three-way split" of Army motor contracts.

The charges were made yesterday before a House Military Affairs Subcommittee by R. P. Sabine, local Ford agent, who added he had turned thumbs down on the alleged "proposition."

Haig, managing director of fleet sales for General Motors and now in Detroit, issued his denial through Joseph Woodside, Washington manager of fleet sales for General Motors and former assistant to Comptroller General McCarl.

Woodside said he would appear before the committee tomorrow to present a formal statement from Haig and to voice his own denial of Sabine's allegations — made twice under oath to the committee. The committee held no hearing today.

Daughter Gets Half Of Babcock Estate

Mrs. Marjorie Babcock McKay, daughter of the late Fred R. Babcock, receives one-half the balance of $559,663 of her father's estate under a final decree of distribution of Judge T. P. Trimble in Orphans Court, today. The remainder goes into a trust fund for purposes specified in the will.

Reds Get School, Mayor To Spiel on Doorstep

Undaunted because Communists had obtained use of the Fifth Avenue High School auditorium ahead of him, Mayor McNair announced today he would stage a rival meeting tomorrow night on the steps of the high school.

Supporting the Mayor in his counter-attraction to the Red meeting will be his guest, Charles H. Ingersoll, single-tax candidate for governor of New Jersey.

The Mayor will expound his opposition to the proposal for charging tolls through the Liberty Tunnels from the high school steps while inside the Communists proclaim on their own ideas. Afterward the Mayor will attempt to crash the Red meeting.

The Mayor's announcement said he had planed use of the auditorium but found that the Board of Education already had granted the Communists permission to use it. So, he said:

"We will hold our meeting on tolls at 9:30 on the steps of the high school. After that I will go into the Communist meeting and very courteously ask for the privilege of the floor for 10 minutes. If they give it to me, I will talk about tolls."

Judge Frowns on Quiz Of Fazio Trial Jury

A petition for the right to recall the jury and question the jurors as to how they reached their verdict was presented before Judge Samuel H. Gardner today during motions for a new trial for Philip Fazio, Swissvale beer garden operator, and Nick Consolo, convicted bombers.

Judge Gardner indicated he would deny the petition. He said:

"This would be a dangerous practice to establish to allow jurors to be questioned. This was one of the strongest cases of circumstantial evidence ever before me and the facts fully justified the conviction."

Fazio and his companion were convicted of bombing the home of Dr. George Seitz, Swissvale Councilman, who had been conducting an anti-racket campaign

OH, SOMEBODY HELP ME!' CRIES WIDOW DOOMED TO CHAIR

ONLY GOVERNOR CAN SAVE N. Y. WOMAN

Husband Slayer Weeps And Prays on Eve of Doom

OSSINING, N. Y., June 27.—(AP.)—This woman in the Sing Sing death house is Anna Antonio. Tomorrow, unless the Governor's hand reaches out to stay the lethal switch, she dies.

She killed a man; her husband. That was the charge, and a jury found it true. Not that she struck with the knife that stabbed him or fired the shot that ended his life some time during the night before Easter Sunday a year ago. Two men did that for her, and they must die, too—Samuel Feraci and Vincent Gaetta.

Anna Antonio plotted the murder, planned it. Her husband had a $5,000 insurance policy on his life. She wanted it. Feraci and Gaetta were to get $800. For that they would kill a man.

No woman has been strapped down to electric death at Sing Sing since 1928. Then it was Ruth Snyder. She, too, had killed her husband.

PLAIN AND WORN

Anna Antonio is 28, a plain, worn-appearing woman, mother of three children. In the death house she weeps for her children. She weeps, too, for her 80-year-old father. Most of all she weeps for Anna Antonio, and through the grated door she cries out:

"Somebody help me. Oh, somebody help me."

It tears at the hardened calm of the guards, this woman weeping and crying out for help. Because she is a woman her misery shadows the equal misery of others—men—who also are there, steeling their courage to walk the last mile. No one pays much attention to Feraci and Gaetta.

A reprieve! Anna Antonio hoped and prayed for it today. If she worried about Feraci and Gaetta, she did not say so.

While she waited last night, the Governor signed a reprieve—but not for her.

NOT FOR HER

It was for another condemned prisoner, young Joseph Murphy, who was the fourth member of the "murder syndicate," which killed "Durable Mike" Malloy. The other three died a fortnight ago. Murphy got a stay. They said he wasn't quite right in the head and couldn't have realized he was taking part in a murder.

While Anna Antonio waited, tortured with thoughts of her fate, the men's League of Mercy of the United States awarded a medal to a famous editorial writer in New York. He had written an editorial urging mercy for the woman. So the league, which does not approve capital punishment, awarded him a medal.

Another New York newspaper carried an editorial calling upon the Governor not to interfere with the carrying out of the death sentence.

NEW HEAT WAVE AFTER STORM

Temporarily abated by last night's downpour, the heat resumed its grip today with prospect that it would approach 90. High humidity added to discomfiture of the sweltering hosts.

During last night's heavy showers, the wind reached a velocity of 70 miles an hour at the County Airport and 38 miles at the weather bureau station atop the Oliver Building. Little damage was reported.

Rainfall totaled .66 inch and boosted the June rain to above normal for the first time.

The mercury dropped 13 degrees in as many minutes when the showers broke. Before the storm the heat was blamed for the death of Frank Coukart, 67, of Maple street extension, Moon Township. He collapsed while at work for an oil company in Coraopolis.

Man, 55, Surrenders After 6-Hour Chase

BUTLER, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—Mike Hossak, although 55, led state police on a six-hour chase before he decided to surrender and face charges of stabbing Mike Krauchak, 27.

Hossak fled yesterday after Krauchak was wounded in a shoulder in a beer resort near Butler. The police followed him to Lyndora, where he had walked into the police station a short time before and informed Police Chief Joseph Sheptak he was "tired running."

FAY MUST NOT MOLEST RUDY

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Trial of the suit of Fay Webb Vallee, in which she seeks to set aside a seperation agreement with her husband, Rudy Vallee, orchestra leader, was adjourned today by agreement until November 19.

Vallee and counsel for both sides appeared before Supreme Court Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo. The orchestra leader swore to his signature on the stipulations and then the adjournment was noted on the record, with Vallee's counsel interposing corrections. Justice Cotillo said:

"It sounds like the signing of the treaty of Versailles."

It was learned that one stipulation in the agreement was that Mrs. Vallee would not molest Vallee if ever he visits California. Mrs. Vallee is at Santa Monica (Cal.) where her action for divorce, $7,500 monthly alimony and $50,000 counsel fees has been halted by a New York court injunction. Under the seperation agreement which Mrs. Vallee seeks to have set aside she receives $100 a month.

PASTOR DENIES HE MADE LOVE

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 27.—(AP.)—The Rev. William D. Welburn, Jr., handsome young clergyman and formerly pastor of the Government Hill Methodist Church, denied from the witness stand in District Court here today that he had ever had intimate relations with Mrs. Wineta Long Welburn.

Mrs. Welburn, seeking divorce from the minister, who denies he is her husband, had testified that she and the Rev. Welburn had been intimate on 10 occasions. Mrs. Melburn seeks custody of William D. Welburn III, 7-month-old child whose paternity Welburn has denied.

Welburn's denials of the pretty plaintiff's accusations caused a stir in the crowded courtroom, filled almost entirely with women.

Louis Schleisinger, questioning the defendant, asked:

"Did you have intimate relations with the plaintiff the fourth time you went out with her, as she stated?"

Welburn said:

"No."

Toothache to Her, Wife Says of Divorced Mate

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—(AP.)—Husbands were likened to toothaches by Dorothy O. Capolungo, Sierra Madre, as she obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce today from Ralph J. Capolungo.

It was her second divorce from Capolungo. They remarried after a previous estrangement. Mrs. Capolungo said:

"Last night I had a tooth removed, and this morning a husband, and I am glad to be rid of both. That's the difference between a tooth and a husband, however: once a tooth is out, there's no putting it back, but there's always the danger you might reconsider with a husband, and he's apt to ache just as badly the second time as the first, if not more."

World's Oldest Man Still Critically Ill

ISTANBUL, June 27.—(AP.)—The critical condition of Zaro Agha, Turk, who claims to be 160 years old, was unchanged today. He is in the Children's Hospital.

GIRL, 5, LOCKED IN STORE

Little Larue Rising walked into the Honus Wagner Company sporting goods store, 813 Liberty avenue, and when she stepped out of the washroom a few minutes later she found herself locked in the place.

Larue, 5 and blonde, who accompanied her mother, Mrs. Walter Rising, of 548A Middle avenue, Wilmerding, on a shopping tour yesterday afternoon, walked into the store a few minutes before closing time, while her mother and friends sat in an automobile in front of the store. While she was in the washroom, the clerks and the manager, unaware of the little girl's presence, locked up the store for the day.

When Larue found herself locked in the place, she knocked on the glass in the door and attracted her mother. Her mother and police, talking to her through the mail slot in the door, assured her that the man with the key was on his way to open the door. There was a smile of thanks on Larue's face when Plainclothesman James Noon slipped her a bar of candy through the slot in the door.

WIFE-BOSSED HOMES GO ON ROCKS

50-50 Set-Up Ideal But Hard to Find In U. S. Survey

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Marriages in which the wife is boss go on the rocks more frequently than those the man dominates, the American Home Economics Association was told today.

And 50-50 marriages—in which the husband and wife are equal partners—are, in America now, "an almost unrealizable ideal, even for most college people."

These findings were given to the association convention today by Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the Institute of Family Relations, after a survey of 3,000 marriages in various parts of the United States.

50-50 BEST BASIS

Partnerships in which the husband wife reach a "50-50 basis," have, he said, the best chance of success—they turn out well 87 per cent of the time.

Of the man-bossed marriages studied, 61 per cent were happy. The felicity score fell to 47 per cent where woman ruled the household.

All the marriages surveyed were contracted by college-trained persons.

Dr. Popenoe said faulty preparation for marriage is the cause of failure to achieve domestic partnership.

The problem is complicated, he said, by the fact that many wives "never can make up their mind how they want to be treated"—whether they want to share or be bossed.

THOSE DOMINANT MALES

Most women, he said, have a tendency "to admire a strong, dominant man, to be willing—in fact, happy—to accept his protection and leadership."

Feminine misconceptions of sex equality—taking the term to mean they must do the same work then do, in the same way—frequently "gum up the domestic works," he said.

Other findings in his marriage survey:

Quarrelling over family finances is universal in unhappy marriages.

Unhappy husbands say their wives talk too much. The wives say their husbands don't talk enough.

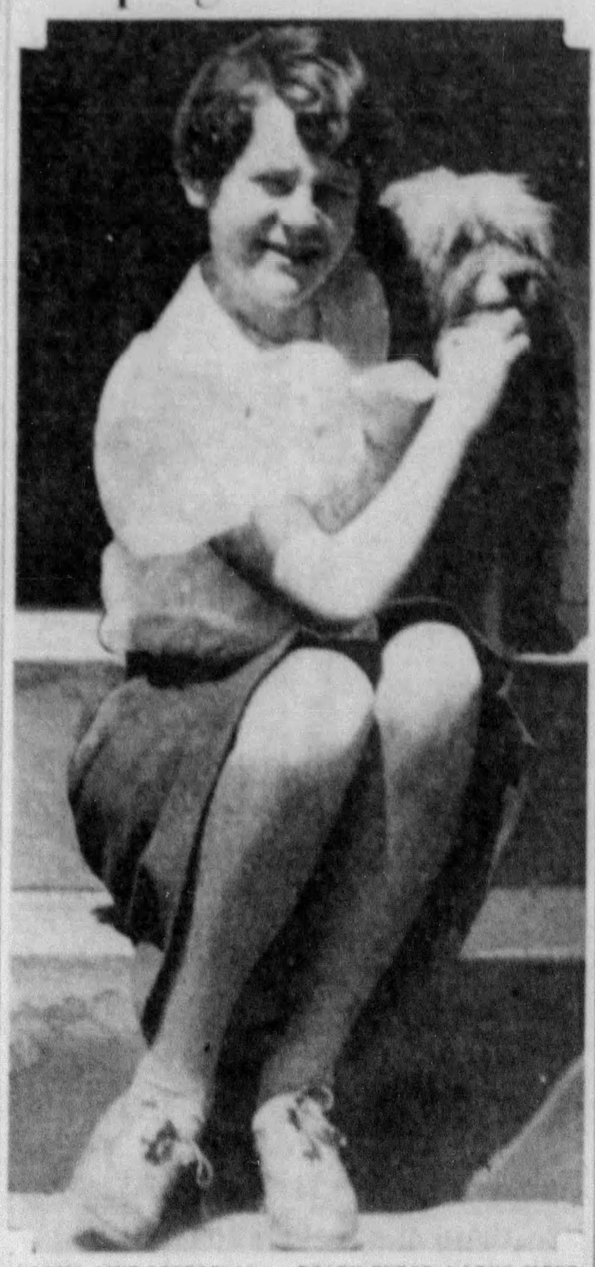
The number of wives who impose on their husbands in connection with housework is as large as the number of men who shirk.

Goslings Hatched With 4 Wings, Legs

DAYTON, Wash., June 27.—(AP.)—Old Mother Goose at the Fred Gilbert farm arose from the nest on which she had been setting and, presto, out walked four goslings.

Each of three had two distinct sets of wings while the fourth, just to be different, floundered about on four legs.

Sleeping Sickness Fatal



NORMA JANE RECTOR, 14 . . . DEATH ENDED A LONG SLEEP

SLEEP DISEASE KILLS GIRL

Life, spreading restfully before the eyes of 14-year-old Norma Jane Rector less than a month ago, today was closed to the pretty Mt. Lebanon sleeping sickness victim.

Suddenly, almost in the face of a hope that had been held forth by doctors for a week while she lay sleeping in St. Francis Hospital, she died yesterday.

Norma first became drowsy about May 26, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Rector, of 262½ Academy avenue, Mt. Lebanon, said last night, complaining she was too tired to go to Sunday School. Daily her drowsiness increased until a week ago, when she was taken to the hospital. A laboratory test determined she was suffering from encephalitis.

Highly active and a good student, Norma was to enter the sophomore class at Mt. Lebanon High School next fall and had completed her freshman year with high rating. She had not missed a day of school during the last five years.

Besides her parents she leaves two brothers, Fax, 19, a student at Penn State, and James Louis, 10. Funeral services will be held at Beinhauer's Funeral Home, 2630 West Liberty avenue, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be Friday.

CRASH TRAPS 2 RUNAWAY GIRLS

The ambitions of two Homestead girls to learn parachute jumping and crash the movies came to grief today in the Allegheny County jail following an automobile smashup in Girard, Pa., with three "boy friends."

Brought back from Girard by County Detectives Michael McDermott and Patrick Trainer, they were lodged in jail pending a hearing tonight — the "boy friends" charged with enticing minors and the girls with being runaways.

The girls are Eleanor Seboric, 609 Anne street, Homestead, and Treva Dixon, Seventh avenue, Homestead. Both insisted to detectives they are 18, but their parents say they are only 14.

The "boy friends" gave their names as James K. North, 20; Howard Chester, 19, and Michael Bottesch, 20, all of Homestead.

They were located at Girard following an automobile accident. The state highway patrol, investigating the crash, took them into custody and notified county detectives. They told police they left Pittsburgh a week ago on a tour of Pennsylvania, spending several days in a hunting lodge near Dubois.

Publisher, Wife Effect Reconciliation

PITTSBURG, Kan., June 27.—ferences between Mrs. Marcet Haldeman-Julius and her publisher husband, E. Haldeman-Julius, have been adjusted and a separate maintenance and recovery of money suit brought by Mrs. Haldeman-Julius was dismissed yesterday by District Judge L. M. Resler on motion of the plaintiff.

SOCIAL HYGIENE STUDY SOUGHT

Social hygiene will be stressed among high school and college students if physicians and civic leaders interested in combating social diseases have their way.

At a meeting in the Community Fund Building, Smithfield street, yesterday, plans were furthered for a drive under auspices of the General Health Council.

Dr. Lester Hollander, director of the Pittsburgh Skin and Cancer Foundation, told the gathering such diseases were most prevelent between the ages of 18 and 24. United States public health figures indicate that 4.6 per 1,000 of all city residents are affected, according to Dr. W. W. McFarland, former director of the City Health Department.

Government appropriations to care for persons suffering from social ailments were urged by Dr. McFarland.

BRIDE MURDER HUNT ON LINER

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Tiny scrapings from a porthole in a giant ocean liner await the examination of city chemists to determine whether they may have been spattered with the blood of Agnes Colonia Tufverson.

Police took the scrapings from the S. S. Olympic last night on the possibility that the missing lawyer might have been slain and her body dumped through the porthole into the ocean.

The cabin was that occupied by her husband, "Capt." Ivan-Ivanovitch Poderjay, who with another wife is being detained by police in Vienna.

Two husky detectives shoved a colleague partly through the opening to show how easy it would be and Miss Sally Tufverson, sister of the missing woman, nearly fainted. She hid her face in her arms and cried.

Instruments Stolen From Musician's Car

Richard P. Martin, Middle street, Wilmerding, reported the theft of a $185 saxophone and a $140 trombone from his car parked at Frankstown avenue and Washington boulevard last night.

GIRL ACCUSER OF PREMIER GRILLED

In Tears, but Sticks To Story as She Resumes Stand

International News Service.

EDMONTON, Alberta, June 27.—Still holding to her story that Premier John E. Brownlee, of Alberta, forced her to submit to him "hundreds of times" over a period of more than two years, pretty 22-year-old Vivian MacMillan resumed the witness stand today for further cross-examination.

Miss MacMillan was pale, tear-stained and weary after an ordeal of five hours in the witness box in the Supreme Court under rapid fire questioning of S. A. L. Smith, K. C., one of Canada's most noted trial lawyers. Her story is the basis of seduction charges brought against the Premier.

The former stenographer in the Attorney General's department resumed the witness stand for at least two more hours of cross-examination.

For six months she fought off the Premier's advances every time they were together, Miss MacMillan testified. The girl had previously told the jury that an asserted illicit relationship existed between herself and the Premier from the end of October, 1932, to early in July, 1933. Premier Brownlee denies the charges.

Queried Attorney Smith:

UNDER GRILLING

"And after six months you ceased resisting, the relations between you became a habit?"

"Yes," was the girl's reply.

Miss MacMillan testified that the Premier gave her "black pills" to take on several occasions.

Attorney Smith declared that the invalid wife of the Premier, after Miss MacMillan's lawyers had filed intention to sue, had made desperate efforts to see Vivian and the latters' parents, but they denied her an interview. Vivian admitted this was true.

Thundered the defense attorney:

"You weren't showing much sympathy for Mrs. Brownlee then. Remember, this is the woman on whose behalf you said you had sacrificed your honor because the Premier told you it would kill his wife to bear another child."

WIFE SUSPICIOUS

Smith then suggested that John Caldwell had started legal action himself, that this step was never considered before he stepped into the picture as Vivian's fiance. Caldwell, a young medical student, is co-defendant with Miss MacMillon in a counter claim for $10,000 for conspiracy to blackmail. No evidence of attempted blackmail has yet been introduced in court.

Next Attorney Smith demanded if Brownlee's wife ever became suspicious of the Premier "when it took him an hour and a half to drive a single girl to her home a few blocks away."

Miss MacMillan replied that when the Legislature was in session in 1923 the Premier left the sessions to hold an asserted clandestine meeting with her. The Premier then told her, she testified, that he was certain his wife was suspicious.

IN PREMIER'S HOME

A close friend of Mrs. Brownlee, Miss MacMillan was invited to stay at the Premier's home on two occasions. Sometimes, she testified, she was forced to go to the Premier's bed when his 16-year-old son, Jack, was sleeping only 18 inches away in a twin bed. Smith branded this phase of her story as incredible.

The attorney produced a surprise exhibit—a letter written by Miss MacMillan to Mrs. Brownlee when the latter was in Vancouver and the stenographer was staying at the Brownlee home in 1931. Smith said the letter was the typical message of a happy girl to an older woman of whom she was very fond and not the letter of a girl who was living in an illicit relationship with that woman's husband.

NESBIT ESTATE DISTRIBUTED

Creditors of the estate of the late Harrison Nesbit, former president of the closed Bank of Pittsburgh, N. 9., will receive about 18 per cent of their claims under a final order of distribution handed down in Orphans Court today by Judge Thomas P. Trimble.

The sum to be distributed amounted to $355,679. The claims, mostly of banks, totaled $2,035,150. The assets were derived from an $800,000 insurance trust fund. This fund, set up for the family, was largely diverted to banker-creditors after a court battle.

Zaharoff, 80, May Wed Poor Monaco Princess

Universal Service.

PARIS, June 27.—Highly placed personages today discussed possibility of a marriage between Sir Basil Zaharoff, aged munitions king and reputed billionaire, and Princess Charlotte of Monaco.

The report is based, apparently, on the fact that both love the principality of Monaco, of which Princess Charlotte's father, His Serene Highness Louis de Grimaldi, general of division in the French Army, is the reigning prince.

Sir Basil is nearly 80, but he has what the French call a "flair for romance."

Monaco is a troubled place these days. Many would like to see the charming Princess return and help her father govern, but with roulette now played everywhere on the Riviera, Monte Carlo is not doing so well.

Monte Carlo, the principality of Monaco and the royal family all could do with a fortune which would re-establish their prosperity. Sir Basil has that fortune and wants to make it available to the place he has loved most.

The chief problem is to persuade the Princess to return. According to reports here she is enjoying life in Florence, where she is frequently seen with the Marquis Strozzi, descendant of the British admiral who helped Mary, Queen of Scots, escape.

Gout, Not Apple, Fatal To Adam, Society Told

LONDON, June 27.—(AP.)—Adam and Eve had a lot of trouble over an apple, but evidence came forward today that it was gout that finally put the first man in his grave.

This theory was advanced by an ancient manuscript put on display in London's Historic College of Arms. The exhibition was opened in celebration of the four hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the association, known as the Kings, Heralds and Pursuivants of Arms Organization.

It dabbles in coats of arms, genealogy, ancient manuscripts and such.

The lowdown on Adam was offered in an ancient vellum pedigree of a Saxon king, who proudly traced his family tree back to Adam. He added illuminatingly at the end that the ancestor of us all "died of gowte."

The manuscript was illustrated by picturesque drawings of Adam and Eve—an apple in thei, hands—surrounded by an assortment of animals.

NORRIS PUSHES LIBERAL FIGHT

By EUGENE J. CADOU
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, veteran Progressive, has no regrets that he bolted the Republican party to support Franklin D. Roosevelt for President, but believes the latter has not gone far enough "to the left."

On the eve of leaving for his summer camp at Chain of Lakes, Wis., Norris today frankly discussed the virtues and shortcomings of the Roosevelt regime and outlined some of his future plans for liberal legislation.

RAPS REPUBLICANS

The Nebraskan still is cold towards the Republican party. He said that under the new chairmanship of Henry P. Fletcher there is "no hope for any new liberalism."

Commenting upon Fletcher's past association with Theodore Roosevelt, Norris said:

"There are a good many fellows who associated with 'T. R.,' and some of them are the worst reactionaries that we have now."

He expressed the opinion President Roosevelt will be re-elected in 1936, and as an after-thought, he added:

"If he were running now, I think he would be."

Discussing the general policy of the President, the 73-year-old legislator said:

"In some respects I think the President could go a great deal farther to the left. But there are a good many places where nobody knows just what is the proper thing to do. You have to try this and you have to try that.

ROOSEVELT PROBLEM

"Roosevelt was confronted with a condition that never was faced by a human being before in the history of the world. We were on the verge of dissolution. Something had to be done or we would just drift. I think that every student of government concedes now that if he had let matters drift, we would have faced utter ruin—the ruin of our civilization. You will recall the first days of his administration when practically every bank in the United States was on the brink of ruin. Maybe Roosevelt hasn't done the right thing here and there. I think he has made some mistakes, but I think anybody would make some."

Norris said his next liberal proposal would be taking the Postoffice Department out of politics. He recalled that the President had asked Postmaster General Farley to prepare a bill to that effect, and announced he plans to introduce such a measure at the next session of Congress.

He expressed doubt as to the national possibilities of third party movements, asserting that independence in all political parties is "the best way to make them good."

ARTISTS DEFY BAN ON NUDES

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—The "nudist wing" of Chicago artists today defied the South Park Commission's ban on nudes and may go to jail for it.

The annual open air art show is scheduled to open on Michigan boulevard Saturday. Last year and the year previous many of the so-called starving artists thumbed noses at the big bad financial wolf through their brisk trade in nudes.

Imagine their consternation then when the Grant Park Board issued the stern edict:

"No nudes of any description will be permitted to be displayed or offered for sale."

The Patrick Henrys of the palette saw red, cobalt and indigo, and hurled camels hair brushes in indignation. They even held a meeting about it.

Yesterday six reluctant artists took up brushes and painted violent-tinted shorts on the nudes they expected to display. Others indicated they would show their nudes and await the "Paddy" wagon.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS -:- By PAUL MALLON

Business Showing Falls Short of U. S. Claims

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Government hand-outs on the business outlook are often mimeographed on perfumed paper. They exude an optimistic fragrance. The ones now being issued are no exceptions.

If you look behind them into the figures you will find actual conditions hardly justify the strong scent.

What has happened is this: For the past four months (March, April, May and June) business has been following the usual seasonal trend rather closely on a plane of about 75 per cent normal (1923-25).

Prospects strongly point to a little more than a seasonal decline in July and August to be followed by a stronger-than-seasonal improvement in September and October. That is the plain unscented outlook.

CHART

One reason the official government prognosticators are waxing lyrical in their official statements now is that the May and June shrinkage in business was no worse than it was. They had expected a stronger decline.

The secret of the strength in industrial production is steel. A price increase goes into effect in July, so the mills have been humming to fill orders before the increased price is effective. That means a sharp curtailment of steel production when the increased price comes along.

Automobile production is going fairly well. Figures for June will be down about 10 per cent from May. The output in April was 356,000 cars; May, 332,000, and in June around 300,000. That is because the manufacturers reduced their prices. They ran up against trouble when they tried to put an increase into effect some weeks ago. The trouble was caused mainly by a large manufacturer who refused to go along with the price increase.

The other big industry, textiles, is in a fixed decline. A 12-week curtailment of cotton textile production (25 per cent) went into effect June 4. Silk weaving shut down for one week in May. That end of the business is now better.

PRICES

The general level of prices has not and will not change much. The price of manufactured goods will be off because of increased competition since the Blue Eagle dulled its talons. Commodity prices should reach moderately upward.

There will be no government action to influence prices materially. No kind of money tampering is seriously contemplated, either by silver buying, devaluation or inflation.

PUBLIC WORKS

The June tabulation on building will be out in a few days. It will show a slight decrease from May in the value of contracts awarded.

The May value was $134,000,000, an increase of 2 per cent over April. This might be considered highly encouraging were it not for the fact that the increase is due to one big contract privately awarded for Radio City in New York. Generally, construction was off in May.

The amount of direct public works and public utilities contracts awarded actually declined 19 per cent in May. That hardly fits in with the speech PWA Director Ickes made a few weeks ago claiming increasingly magnificent success for his program.

Of course, Mr. Ickes gets his optimistic figures by counting the amount of money he has advanced to states, municipalities and others for construction. Much of that money has not been spent and cannot be spent for months.

That is the whole secret of the delay in getting the big three billion dollar PWA fund working. Most of the money was loaned out and is now lying idle. Those who got it are unable to start work because they are unable to raise their share of the cost or because their plans were in an embryo state when they got the money, or for various other reasons their work has been delayed.

PROOF

The proof of that deduction is that the amount of public works contracts let in May was $71,600,000, a decline of 5 per cent from April.

The value of privately financed building was $62,900,000, an increase of 12 per cent (the Radio City project).

A searcher for the facts will need a gas mask to protect himself from the perfumed claims about the PWA accomplishments.

DEATH HAUNTS FREED FACTOR

International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 27.—John (Jake the Barber) Factor will in all probability be a free man before nightfall today, but he remains a haunted man—stalked by the wrath of an underworld which has sentenced him to death.

Factor has been ordered freed from the Sycamore County Jail where he was held pending extradition proceedings. He is wanted in England on a charge of fraudulently accepting $7,000,000 from British investors.

But Factor can never be free in the vernacular of the underworld. In one of the most sensational trials in the history of Cook County jurisprudence, Factor defied the wrath of the "Terrible Touhy" gang and gave testimony of sufficient import to send Roger Touhy and three henchmen to prison for life for kidnaping.

Sworn to wreak vengeance for the abduction of himself and his son, Jerome, the one-time barber identified the gangsters in open court. With Roger Touhy in prison, the gang is split asunder, but fragments of it remain, and those members who live by the gun, Factor must escape before he can go unmolested.

LONDON CABLES NEW NOTE ON DEBTS TO U. S.

LONDON, June 27.—(AP.)—A new British note was cabled to the British Embassy in Washington today in which the British government emphasized its desire to negotiate a permanent war debts settlement with the United States.

Foreign office officials declined to reveal the exact nature of the note except to say, "It is quite short."

The British policy of the past in reference to the desire for a discussion of a full settlement of the debt question was understood to have been restated as part of the communication.

The note is in reply to one by Secretary of State Cordell Hull suggesting payment "in kind," but it comes with Great Britain already in the defaulter class. She entered that status June 15 when she refused to pay an installment.

British circles pointed out that the day following the Hull note President Roosevelt took the position that payments in kind could be only "very partial" ones.

Suggestions at home that England give Bermuda or some other possession near America to the United States in payment have drawn positive government opposition.

It was officially pointed out that this would mean compulsory alienation of British citizens.

Few positive developments in the debt situation are expected here this summer, London feeling the question may lie dormant until Congress reassembles next fall.

Another financial matter—at this time more pressing—occupied the government today. Representatives began conversations with a German delegation in an attempt to reach an agreement on a moratorium dispute involving a potentially costly trade war.

HITLER YIELDS TO VETS

den to the Chancellor, owing to the tendency abroad to regard them as an armed force.

The many official denials in the past that the Brown Shirts were a military organization have been taken as an indication that the issue has often been discussed among government leaders.

Food Panic Feared In German Crisis

International News Service.

BERLIN, June 27.—Indicative of anxiety in high places, a campaign was launched here today to keep the populace quiet and check any extraordinary purchasing waves which would inaugurate an era of hoarding.

Because of the tottering financial structure the most stringent orders were issued, cutting down the imports of almost everything into Germany. Food prices, in anticipation of the governmental decree, had advanced and are expected to continue to advance, with prices of other things following suit.

The newspapers print a warning to hoarders because of reports which have been spreading through grapevine sources that prices will rise sharply and that there may even by a shortage in certain commodities.

Back-Door Exit Predicted As End of Herr Hitler

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—The New York Post, in the last of a series of copyrighted articles by Johannes Steel, says a reversal of Nazi policies must come if "Germany is not to drop into a bottomless pit of social and economic chaos which would bring the gravest of repercussions the world over."

The writer, in previous articles of the series, predicted that the Hitler regime would be succeeded by a military dictatorship. In today's article he says:

"Although no absolute and complete reversal of the Nazi policies as regards the Jews can be expected immediately after the new regime assumes power, it is certain that the desperate plight of the Jews in Germany will be alleviated by a liberal interpretation of the so-called 'Aryan paragraph.' Finally, their rights as citizens will be restored."

The article concludes:

"As for Hitler himself?

"He will go out of power, just as he got into power—

"Through the back door."

U. S. British Experts Talk Naval Plans

Navy's Alaska Flight Test of Patrol Ability

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Training exercises to determine ability of the Navy's patrol seaplanes to operate along the Pacific coast "under any circumstances" forms the chief purpose of the proposed flight of 12 naval seaplanes to Alaska, Secretary of the Navy Swanson said today. He added:

"We want to have these planes capable of operating anywhere along the coast under any circumstances."

Swanson added there were no immediate plans for establishment of a naval air base at Alaska, but that in the event of trouble in the Pacific "every inch of American territory would be guarded as far as possible."

Bombings Continue To Flare in Austria

PENNA. DENIES 'KHAKI SHIRTS' CHARTER

HARRISBURG, June 27.—(AP.)—Invasion of Pennsylvania by what he describes as a movement "to set up a national dictatorship" in the United States has been halted by Richard J. Beamish, Secretary of the Commonwealth, through refusal to recognize the Khaki Shirts of America.

Beamish, in refusing the Khaki Shirts application for charter rights in the state, declared:

"This is an attempt to obtain official authority under the laws of Pennsylvania for a movement whose object is destructive of constitutional government."

Warning the applicants "any attempt to organize for such objects will bring them within the reach and power of American justice," the Secretary of the Commonwealth notified state and local police of his decision "for such surveillance and action as may be necessary."

The Khaki Shirts have a New Jersey charter.

TEACHERS TOLD TO GO IN FOR POLITICS

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—Asserting that "teachers must get into politics to take schools out of politics," Miss Selma M. Borchardt, of Washington, legislative representative of the American Teachers' Federation, today charged the public schools of the nation were "simply a part of a vicious spoils system."

She told 200 delegates to the federation's annual convention:

"As long as teacher tenure is not written into state law, the selection of teachers, promotions and the administrations in general will remain a matter of petty personal and partisan politics."

All too often, Miss Borchardt charged, a school superintendent appointed for political reasons uses his office to build up the political machine which put him in office.

"Tenure, adequate pay, pensions can be secured only by articulate political effort of the teachers, exercising their rights and assuming their duties as citizens.

"Congress has given more to asphalt roads than to the roads of childhood because asphalt roads can maintain a better lobby than the children can."

Declaring the Richberg substitute for the Wagner Labor Disputes bill was inadiquate Miss Borchardt urged the convention to work for the passage of the original Wagner bill next year. She also recommended the delegates r-affirm their support of the principle of Federal aid for old-age pension.

Miss Borchardt urged the convention to call upon its locals and the American Federation of Labor to support the munitions manufacture investigation authorized by Congress.

"A brain trust for teachers," was called a necessity for the organization of the teachers by James C. Adell, of Greater Cleveland Local No. 279.

Adell said the organization of all universities could be accomplished in 60 days after the announcement of the Federation's program of adult education and political action. In Ohio, he said, 12 per cent of the teachers were paid up members in the Federation.

SCHOOLS URGED FOR JOBLESS

HARRISBURG, June 27.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today recommended extension of Pennsylvania's school facilities so that graduates and students, unable to find work, may continue their education through the summer.

Pointing out that the state's high schools are disgorging 70,000 pupils and the colleges 12,000 and that these will join the 200,000 young peiple between 18 and 21 who are out of work, the executive said none of them has a chance to do anything successfully but loaf. He asserted:

"But they don't want to loaf. Thousands want to continue their education.

"They need not be subjected to grade-grouping, marks, honor rolls and other artificial incentives to learning. Existing educational programs could be extended to include activities such as are found in work camps.

"To say we cannot afford to do something for these boys and girls and these young men and women is to ignore the much greater cost of maladjustment and defeat, often leading to crime. It is at this age that most criminals are developed."

Endurance Flight Balked by Mishap

MERIDIAN, Miss., June 27.—(AP.)—A broken cylinder early today ended the attempt of the Key brothers to set a new endurance flight record after they had spent 123 hours in the air.

Back to Dancing

TILLY LOSCH

TILLY TO DANCE AND FORGET

LONDON, June 27.—(AP.)—Tilly Losch, no longer bound to her wealthy British husband, said last night she would "dance and forget all about it."

She told the London Herald some hours after the decree nisi was granted to Edward Frank James:

"Now I am going to bed and sleep away all the misery I have suffered in court and dream of the day—soon now, thank God—when I shall be dancing again."

She said she was sorry she had been divorced because:

"I did nothing wrong at any time, but now it is all over and I hope to be happy once more quite soon."

Asked if she planned to return to the United States, the Viennese dancer said everything was "in the air."

PENNSYLVANIA BAR MEETING CONVENES

WERNERSVILLE, June 27.—(AP.)—With an executive committee report proposing revision of the state constitution as an important topic of discussion, members of the Pennsylvania Bar Association convene their fortieth annual meeting today in Galen Hall.

The executive committee met yesterday and its report will be one of about a score dealing with criminal law, the judiciary, unauthorized practices, changes in admission requirements and a national program of bar associations.

Speakers on the first-day program are to include Owen J. Roberts, associate justice of the United States Supreme Court; Robert von Moschzisker, former chief justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and former United States Senator George Wharton Pepper.

The annual address will be given tonight by Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican nominee for governor.

FINLEY SCORED BY WOMEN

Leaders of a delegation of Beechview women, seeking an extension of street car transfer privileges in Beechview before the Traction Conference Board, reprimanded Chairman Charles A. Finley because of his manner of conducting the hearing yesterday.

Finley is reported to have remarked that the extension would cause a loss to the Pittsburgh Railways Company. It prompted Miss Susan Scheif, president of the Women's Democratic Club, to say:

"Aren't you supposed to be neutral in these matters? You are not here to speak for the railways company."

Decision on the request was reserved.

Seal Scroll in Modern Sphinx

A parchment scroll, hermetically sealed in a lead tube, will be placed in the breast of a modern sphinx, in Rosicrucian Park, San Jose, Cal., by the Ancient Mystical Order of the Rosy Cross, July 12, during the Order's anrual convention there, Mrs. Ethel G. Mortimer, of 1120 North Euclid avenue, said today.

The Rosicrucian Order is a nonsectarian, fraternal body of men and women devoted to the investigation, study, and practical application of natural and spiritual laws.

KIDNAPED MAN FREED UNHURT

International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 27.—His kidnapers were gentlemen and even apologized for seizing the wrong man, Andrew Sciacca, 50, reputedly wealthy cafe owner, insisted to police today after he returned home unharmed 24 hours following his abduction.

No ransom was paid. Sciacca and members of his family insisted, although an attorney representing the family had issued an invitation to the abductors to open ransom negotiations. Police expressed the opinion that some agreement had been reached with the kidnapers.

Sciacca said he was released "somewhere on the South Side" late last night and returned home in a taxicab. He explained:

"It was all a mistake. They got the wrong man."

Autoist Hits Woman, Leaves Her in Rain

Police are seeking a motorist who struck a woman at Fifth avenue and Bigelow boulevard last night, put her in his auto to give spectators the impression he was going to a hospital, and then put her out of the car in the rain several blocks away.

The victim, Mrs. Lizzie Wallace, 52, of 2020 Gregory street, was taken to Montefiore Hospital by another driver. She suffered an injured left leg.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Sister Finds Love, Like Rose, Has Its Thorns

Love, like a rose, has its thorns . . . This girl has found out . . . The fellow who cares for her, and visits her steadily, she doesn't even like. Only feels sorry for him.

While the one she is in love with only asks for her telephone number . . .

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am 17, and go with a fellow the same age. I do not care for him, and we argue continually. But he has been so wonderful to me, and I feel so sorry to break his heart. He has very little money, and always saves everything to spend on me . . . He has told me, and others, that he cares for me very much. I am all he has, as his father and mother are dead.

Miss Brunot

LIKES SOMEONE ELSE

But I like someone else. He treats me very nice, and once asked for my telephone number. That is all. He has told his friends he likes me, and also his sister, with whom I am chummy. . . . He has another girl . . . She is the only one he has ever fallen for.

What do you think of both situations?

Sincerely yours,
J. B. W.

Since the fellow you care for has never fallen for but one girl, and that isn't you, my advice is to forget him. . . . You will get nowhere near his heart, J. B. W. . . . Try less argument with your real friend. He sounds very nice to me . . . A man who saves everything he has to spend on you, is not to be trifled with . . . There are times, you know, that real young girls like yourself, never are in love with anyone attainable . . . It is romance you seek rather than love . . . So beware of being too serious.

NO HARM DONE

Dear Miss Brunot:

I wrote to you, and instead of putting Miss Brunot I wrote Mrs. Brunot . . . I found out my mistake later . . . I am so very sorry. That I may have offended you. BASHFUL.

No harm done, Bashful . . . Although the Miss Brunot is a trifle more romantic, don't you think? . . . There is a glamour about being single in these big days for the sisters . . .

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a girl of 17, and in love with a boy of 18. I am peppy and attractive and popular . . . I care for this boy very much. . . . He doesn't go with other girls, but lately I seem to be losing him . . . What can I do to win him back? Should I try being a clinging vine?

WORRIED SICK.

The clinging vine stunt was femininely attractive before and during the gay nineties . . . But since then it has taken a back seat . . . So don't go in for it. I am sure it wasn't what first attracted this fellow to you, anyway . . . No doubt he admired your peppiness, and maybe since you are in love with him a certain meekness has crept in . . . Try to be your old self when with him, and certainly victory will crown your effort. After all, you are young, and as you say, popular, and a little disappointment in first love mightn't prove as bad as you think . . .

TOO BASHFUL

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have been introduced to many friends. I feel bashful when I talk to them. And sometimes even try to avoid them. This attitude is practically ruining my popularity.

Not long ago I was introduced to a boy of about 18. He attends the same school I do. I met him in the hall the other day, and he spoke. But I didn't answer. I've met him several other times and he also spoke, but through my bashfulness, I looked elsewhere. Now when I meet him, he stares coldly. Shall I speak, or what shall I do?

BASHFUL.

The milk is badly spilt in the case you mention, Bashful. However, you may be able to make amends, by speaking most pleasantly when you see him, and making some sort of a tactful explanation, such as saying you are absent-minded, or short-sighted. . . . Being bashful in the way you describe is not a lone experience for a very young girl.

It is a self-consciousness, my sister, that many of us have suffered from at one time or another. . . . It indicates a sensitive quality, and also a dreamy nature. . . . You are romantic, too . . . and imagine things about boys. Boys, after all, are a practical sex, with two feet planted very steadily on the ground. . . . And when their social advances are not accepted, they are likely to turn elsewhere.

Develop your will power, and make yourself speak to people when one of those fits of bashfulness overtakes you. It will be no time at all, until you have mastered the trouble.

It is vexatious, but as we go through life we discover very few people take time to analyze our inner motives . . . We are usually taken on face value . . . Thus we must try ourselves to overcome certain social handicaps we may possess.

MARRY THE GIRL YOU LOVE DESPITE GOSSIPS, SAYS FAY KING

KNOWING WHAT I HAVE TOLD YOU OF MY PAST YOU STILL THINK WE SHOULD MARRY AND BE HAPPY?
SURE! WHY NOT?
HE NEVER BRINGS UP THE PAST, WHY SHOULD YOU, AND OTHERS?
WE WOULD BE PERFECTLY HAPPY IF THE MEDDLERS AND GOSSIPS WOULD LET US ALONE!
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

When a man falls in love he does not consider much else but that he loves the girl and would marry her.

It is usually irate relatives who begin to point out the "impossibility" of "such" a marriage! Yet many men who have defied these and married as they wished have never had reason to regret their choice.

Often girls who have known bitterness in life appreciate good husbands and good homes more than girls who were safely sheltered always.

If the girl had a past, which telling him he forgave and they were married, it is cruel of others to continue gossip and criticism of her.

But let the happy pair ignore them if they are spoken by those who would mar their happiness.

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Standardizing Play

At times in studying Bridge hands it is amazing to note the diverse lines of bidding and play adopted by players of varying degrees of skill and different types of temperament. For instance, some hands in Duplicate games will afford almost as many different contracts as there are tables at which they are played. On other hands, not only the final contract but even the Opening lead seems to be the same in every case. Subsequent development of the cards in the combined hands by the Declarer or brilliant defense by the opponents may bring about a different final result, but the stage setting is the same. On the hand below, played in the Individual Master's Tournament at Crockford's Club, New York, a final contract in the same denomination, notrump, was reached at every table by the North and South players. In several cases a contract of three no-trump was made, while in one amazing case a contract of two notrump was defeated one trick, because the player with the South hand assumed that he should be in a contract of three notrump and felt that whatever resulted, he would have a bad score.

East, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ 5 ♡ K Q 6 5 2 ◇ Q 10 8 2 ♣ J 9 5
♠ A J 10 9 3 ♡ J 8 4 ◇ 9 5 ♣ K 10 6	North West East South	♠ 8 7 6 ♡ 7 3 ◇ A J 7 4 ♣ 7 4 3 2
	♠ K Q 4 2 ♡ A 10 9 ◇ K 6 3 ♣ A Q 8

At one table, where Mr. Walter Salmon was seated South, the bidding went as follows:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	2 N T	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	3 N T	Pass	Pass
Pass

North bid three diamonds because he felt that he must find another bid, yet he did not wish to rebid his weak five-card heart suit and could not support South's spades.

With the Opening lead of the spade Jack, Mr. Salmon proceeded to make the hand. He won the trick with the Queen, then ran five rounds of hearts, discarding two diamonds. West meanwhile had made two discards, parting with the club 6 and the diamond 5. East discarded in turn the diamond 7, the club 2 and the club 3. Mr. Salmon then led a small diamond from Dummy, and East failed to cover with the Ace. West played the nine, and Mr. Salmon now decided to stake all on the proposition that West had no more diamonds left in his hand, and played the spade King. West thereupon proceeded to cash his spade tricks, but was compelled to give Mr. Salmon the last two tricks with the Ace and Queen of clubs.

The contract was a bad one, and the defense also was bad. Against an Opening spade lead a contract of three notrump should always be set as, with a proper manipulation of the defensive cards, South does not have time to set up his game-going trick. In the line of play here outlined, of course, East should have won the diamond lead with the Ace and returned a spade to the closed hand. Whether South ducked or covered would be immaterial as five tricks must be cashed against him.

It is perhaps questionable whether North and South should reach three notrump. They have only one suit in which any considerable number of tricks may be cashed the way the cards lie, but the contract is not such a bad gamble as its success probably depends upon the favorable location of only one or two of the adversely held cards.

Tomorrow's Hand

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ 8 6 5 ♡ A J 9 2 ◇ K J 10 6 ♣ J 6
♠ 7 4 ♡ 7 6 5 4 3 ◇ 9 5 4 3 ♣ 10 5	North West East South	♠ K J 10 ♡ K Q 8 ◇ A Q 7 ♣ K Q 8 4
	♠ A Q 9 3 2 ♡ 10 ◇ 8 2 ♣ A 9 7 3 2

The hand will be dicsussed in tomorrow's article.

(Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your question to Josephine Culbertson, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.)

Household Hints

Apply olive oil to knives and forks that are to be put away, and they will retain their brightness and be found free from rust when required again.

An excellent mold can be made by placing a small basin inside a larger one and pouring the jelly around it. When the smaller basin is removed the center can be filled with stewed fruit or whipped cream.

How to Keep Well :-: :-:

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

A Special Diet for Tubercular Patients

Recently I have received requests for special diets. Many desired a list of foods that would be advantageous to sufferers from tuberculosis.

Dr. Copeland

Before discussing the diet in tuberculosis let me briefly consider the disease. It is a disease likely to develop in young adults if they are undernourished. Women seeking to reduce, often diet so strenuously that they become undernourished and susceptible to tuberculosis. In recent years the number of young victims of this disease has increased and it is probably due to unwise dieting.

One of the first warnings of consumption or tuberculosis is persistent cough accompanied by expectoration. Loss of appetie and weight, constant fatigue and pain in the chest, are other important signs. The victim is scrawny looking and emaciated. This is due to the general run-down condition.

To overcome the loss of weight and emaciation it is necessary that a proper diet be followed. At one time forced feeding was advocated. Milk and eggs were the chief foods given. Today, milk and eggs still have a vital place in the diet, but many other foods are included.

A well balanced diet containing all the important food substances is an excellent diet to follow. The amount of food to eat and how often food is to be taken must be determined by your doctor.

The chief purpose of the diet is to build up the body and increase weight. Foods rich in fat may be eaten. Those foods abundantly supplied with all the vitamins are an essential part of the diet.

I cannot overstate the value of milk in the diet of the tubercular. Milk is an important food for everybody. It contains fat which is readily digested and well received by the body. In fact, next to egg yolk, it is one of the most easily assimilated forms of fat.

In addition, vitamins A, B and C are found in goodly quantities in milk. These substances promote growth and protect the body against infection.

Another indispensable food in tuberculosis is the egg.

Of course, other foods must be included in the diet, such as fresh fruits and vegetables, cereals, cheese, butter and bread. All kinds of soups may be given. Meats, fowl and fish should be included. Heavy desserts are not advisable, but those made of milk, cream and eggs are both beneficial and tempting.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

After the Secret Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My wife and I were secretly married recently, and we intend to have an open wedding in the summer. My sisters are planning to have a few showers in the near future . . . not knowing that we are already married. I have been told that the guests at these showers when they hear we were married before the shower will feel angry about it. Should I allow these showers to be planned, or shall I stop them by some excuse? D.

Under the circumstances, and definitely to avoid what may be very unpleasant future complications and misinterpretations, I am sure that it will be the way of wisdom for you to nip in the bud any plans for showers or other supposedly pre-wedding festivities or celebrations. Since you and your wife chose the unconventional way, the best taste is for you to call as little attention as possible to the unconventionality.

If, by having an "open wedding" you mean that you are going to follow what may have been a civil ceremony by a religious ceremony, I am most enthusiastic about this. There is a spiritual fortification about this that is important and significant. But if you mean that you are planning to have a real wedding with all the details carried out as if you had not been married before, I do not agree that this is thething to do. If your guests are kept in ignorance that this is the second ceremony, there is the shadow of insincerity and concealment that is fundamentally questionable as to honesty and taste. Please consider this step seriously, and consider what comments it undoubtedly will cause in the future.

Have the religious ceremony if you wish . . . and I think it's a fine idea—but have only the parents on both sides present. Then tell your relatives and friends of the marriage, or have a gathering of your relatives and close friends in your new home to tell and to celebrate the happy and important news.

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Emerges at Screams

If my mother-in-law were not an old woman and a semi-invalid, the blow she gave me with an umbrella, when she thought I was a burglar entering her room, would have floored me, if indeed it had not rendered me unconscious.

Her aim was most exellent. It was a well-directed blow, and even with her lack of strength in her arms, I felt decidedly groggy when it landed on the top of my head. Nor did her grasp of my hair add to my comfort. Indeed, it seemed to me that she was bent upon pulling it out by the roots while her shrieks made my nerves literally tie themselves in knots.

"Mother!," I gasped. "Don't! It is only I, Margaret, but her deafness and her own screaming effectually prevented her from hearing and I saw that, as a child might have done, she had closed her eyes when she had once secured my hair and had not seen my face at all.

There was a clatter of feet outside the door and the voices of Hugh, Lillian and my father called to her and finally attracted her attention.

"I've caught a burglar," she called, and there was in her voice no hint of fright; rather of excited triumph.

'WOMAN BURGLAR'

"It's a woman," she went on. "I can't leave her to open the door. I've got her by the hair, and I don't think she'll dare shoot with you outside the door. She got in through Mary's closet. Some of you come that way and get her. I'll hold her till you get here."

I heard three low, shocked ejaculations, then the sound of running feet. Evidently no one cared for the task of trying to make Mother Graham hear any other theory than the one she was tenaciously cherishing. Lillian, followed closely by the others, burst into the closet just as Mother Graham gave an extra tug at my hair.

"Come out of that, your varmint," she said, "and let me get a good look at you."

"Margaret!" she gasped, letting to my hair and fairly staggering back against the nearest wall. "You! What in tunket does this mean?"

"Better let me explain, Mother Graham," Lillian said suavely. "Madge looks all in. You must swing a mean policeman's club."

"Oh! Oh! You poor child!" For the first time, my mother-in-law recognized my plight, and her old face and voice were filled with contrition as she sank into the nearest chair. Then she bridled again.

"But I can't help feeling it served you right, coming in on me like that. I've been expecting somebody to break in somewhere for a couple of hours. I've been sitting here ready for 'em. I thought they might come by the window.

"This all fits in," Lillian said quirkly, and I guessed that she saw the opportunity to keep my mother-in-law from learning of the true reason for my nocturnal visit. "You see, we heard some queer noises, and thought that a burglar might have sneaked inside one of the rooms and hidden, with an eye to some of the wedding presents Mary and Noel left behind for safe keeping. We knew you kept your door locked, so Madge volunteered to come through the closet. She hoped you wouldn't waken, and that we wouldn't have to alarm you."

LIGHT SLEEPER

"Fine chance anybody has of getting into my room without waking me," my mother-in-law retorted. "I always have been a very light sleeper. I'd know if a cat came in."

If I had not been so panic-stricken over the small boys, I could not have controlled my risibles at this statement. For Mother Graham, when she is not restless from illness or from undue excitement, cannot be wakened, or so her son declares, by anything less than a salvo of artillery. But my mood distinctly had no laughter in it, and I listened impatiently to Lillian's grave assurance that she knew of my mother-in-law's susceptibility to the slightest sound.

"Would you mind telling us just what made you wakeful?" Lillian went on, and I saw her, from behind her back, wave a hand in a signal of dismissal to Hugh and my father. With the assurance that they were going on with the search for the boys, I composed myself to listen to what I knew from experience would be a rambling statement on the part of my mother-in-law.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

For the good of the teeth drink milk and orange juice and eat lettuce. Wise men in the dental profession say that these foods give teeth health and endurance.

Fashion demands the slim, smooth back which displays itself when evening robe or bathing suit is worn.

Posture turns the trick. Keep the hips back, tummy flat, chest up, back with the right in-curve at the waistline. If adipose tissue has banked up high on the back, swing arms upward, first one and then the other with a hard muscle pull. Clasp hands at back of head, bend backward and forward from the waistline.

Whites of eggs form an excellent shampoo for silvery hair that has taken on canary tints.

Fluff up six or seven, less than that won't make a thorough job of removing surface dust. Begin with a prolonged rinsing, friction in some of the egg while, rinse, use more, rinse again. Tuck the head into the washbowl which has been filled with tepid water to which a few drops of bluing have been added.

CLUES TANGLED IN KILLING OF 3

McALISTER, Okla., June 27.—(AP.)—Pittsburg County authorities, seeking to determine who killed three highway workers and why, found the evidence increasingly tangled as they attempted to unwind it today.

Eight persons were in custody. One of them accused two of the others of the slayings. Bun Riley, in a sworn statement, named Bill Moore and George Baker as the killers of William Gann, Homer Beasley and Hobart Watkins. Baker and Moore flatly denied his story.

Riley's statement, as reported by officers, described a drinking party at Baker's home Sunday afternoon, at which Baker told him he had "put a couple of fellows away and Bill Moore put his man out of the way, too."

11TH BABY BORN TO SLAYER

MARKED TRUCE AT, June 27.—(AP.)—Elizabeth Green, 44-year-old farm woman, was "doing nicely" today following the birth of her eleventh child by the husband she killed Friday night, when, she says, he drove her from their home in "No Man's Land."

There was nothing exciting about last night's experience for Mrs. Green. Neighbors came to the humble homme and attended her. There was no need for a doctor, she reasoned, for doctors cost money, and there was so little.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Fred H. Stafford quoted her as saying she shot her husband, Luther Green, 52, because he threatened her and drove her from home. Stafford had her released pending a grand jury investigation in October.

After her preliminary hearing, Mrs. Green showed she didn't harbor any resentment against the husband by attending his funeral.

Du Ponts Mum on Troth Of Ethel, Franklin, Jr.

Universal Service.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 27.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President, will be a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont tonight on the occasion of the debut of their daughter, Miss Ethel du Pont.

Friends of the debutante's parents refused to comment on reports that young Roosevelt and Miss du Pont may shortly become engaged to marry, pointing out that both are young and certain to complete their education before any such announcement would be made.

Roosevelt, now a frequent visitor at the du Pont home, is a Harvard student. Last April he punched a photographer who tried to snap him with Miss du Pont at a wrestling match. He has been a guest at social functions at Ethel Walker School, Simsbury, Conn., where Miss du Pont was a student.

ST. LOUIS, May 27.—(AP.)—Dr. Homer L. Meyers, El Dorado (Ill.) dentist murdered on his farm June 18, had $115,381 in cash and bonds in the First National Bank here, it was learned from an affidavit filed here by his widow, Mrs. Nelle M. Meyers.

Harold St. Clair, former Ohio convict who confessed he fatally shot Meyers, has refused to say why he killed the dentist. Authorities said robbery apparently was not the motive as $80 was found in the dentist's pocket, and that although his office was ransacked only private papers were touched.

Model Builders' Course for Beginners; Lesson 14—Finishing and Flying Model

By LAWRENCE SHAW
National Director

The only constructing detail left to complete our low-wing flier is to assemble the parts which incorporate the power plant. This includes the propeller unit, motor hooks and the rubber itself.

PROPER LAUNCHING . . . . NOTE THE MODEL'S SLIGHT TILT

We have left before us, on our work bench, three small washers which we call bearings, the propeller itself with the shaft already inserted through its hub, the thrust bearing which holds our propeller to the model, four feet of ⅛-inch flat rubber and the combination rear hook and tail skid fitting.

Follow Diagram Very Carefully

With today's column I am publishing a diagram showing just how these various parts are affixed to your model. By following it carefully you will have absolutely no trouble.

First take your thrust bearing, and cement this to the upper side of the front of your fuselage, or motor stick, with the "eye" part standing upright. In addition to cementing this fitting to the motor stick, bind it with thread as well.

Next take one of the small washers and cement it to the back end of your propeller hub, inserting your propeller shaft through it. When this is dried, insert your other two washers, or bearings as they are rightly termed, but leave them loose, as shown in diagram.

Your propeller unit is now complete so that you can insert your propeller shaft through the eye in the thrust bearing.

Now take your combination rear motor hook and tail skid and insert this right through your motor stick just at the front end of your elevator or stabilizer.

When you have pushed this fitting through the wood into position, place plenty of cement around it so that it will become solidly fixed in position, as pull and tension from rubber, when model is flying, will tend to force the fitting out of place.

We are all ready for the final step which is to put the rubber on. All you have to do is take your four feet of rubber and tie the ends together making one complete loop.

Then double this over to make two complete loops or four strands of rubber. Affix one end of your double loop through the end of your propeller shaft as shown in diagram, and then loop the other end through the rear motor hook also as shown.

Your model is now finished, and believe me, if you have followed these details carefully, in the past lessons, you should have a dandy flier.

How to Fly The Model

We are now ready to take our model out-doors and fly it. Drawing accompanying today's lesson shows proper position for launching your model.

First we are going to "test-fly" our low-wing plane to find out if the position of the wing is correct, and so we will glide it instead of using the motor power. Just take your model in hand as you did your glider and sail it through the air.

If, after releasing it from your hand with but a slight push, it climbs to a vertical position and then slips backward towards the ground, which we call a stall and tail slide, your wing is too far forward and must be moved back a little.

If it does just the opposite, goes into a steep dive, then it is a sign that your wing is too far back on the motor stick and must be moved forward.

HOW TO ASSEMBLE 'MOTOR'

Your model should make a long, easy glide, just as your glider did. When you have adjusted your wing to accomplish this, then you are ready to wind up the motor and let it fly.

Wind Motor To the Right

To wind the motor, hold the model in your left hand and with the index finger of your right hand turn the propeller around clockwise, the same way the hands of a clock turn, to the right.

After you have given your motor plenty of winds, let's say about 100, turn the model away from you, holding it as shown in drawing accompanying this column. The motor is fully wound when it is entirely knotted.

Hold the motor stick, back of the wings, with your right hand, and the tip of your propeller with your left hand. When you are ready to release the craft, direct it slightly upward, withdraw your left hand from the propeller.

After the propeller has made two or three revolutions release your right hand from the motor stick, giving the model a slight push—not too much.

Watch her climb and circle and fly. Seconds, yes! Even minutes if you were careful in constructing this first flying craft you ever built. It certainly is some fun.

By carving various pitch propellers, adjusting wings and making minor changes that will come to you as you watch it fly, you can make a real championship flier out of this first job.

And now you are ready to make an actual model for entry in the model plane derby. The next lesson will be published in a day or so giving you directions for building a real championship endurance derby single stick tractor—with a built up wing and tail unit model, just like real planes.

Your local wing commander will make a very important announcement about the Pittsburgh Model Plane Derby in this column tomorrow.

Be sure to watch for it!

Happy Landings!

Globe Trotter

Hello Ladies and Gentlemen:

John Heinz issues a timely warning to Fourth of July celebrants. The fire chief points out that all fire works are dangerous and even the so-called "safe" sparklers become white hot and will ignite whenever inflammable material comes in contact with them—a little girl's flimsy dress perhaps.

He pleads that we all celebrate the Fourth in a conservative and reasonably orderly manner.

In the next couple of days the Globe Trotter will broadcast on the 12:15 broadcast a list of Fourth of July "don't" as submitted by Fire Chief Heinz.

* * *

Received a note from J. E. Knight, of Short street, Greentree, who says he has a sulky for a little child who might have use for it.

Will some needy mother call the Globe Trotter's secretary, Ann Bales, Grant 6500?

* * *

Among the prize possessions of a Globe Trotter is an original painting of Robert Burns. The painting, cabinet size, is over 100 years old. It belongs to Mrs. L. C. Brooks, of 136 Zara street, Mt. Oliver.

Traffic Club to Hold Golf Outing

The Traffic Club of Pittsburgh will hold a summer golf outing at the Edgewood Country Club, Thursday, July 12, Warren W. Brown, entertainment committee chairman, announced today.

Originality Marks New Program

By AIRCASTER

The oracles of radio row will nod sagely and tell you that "the reason for the continued absence from the air of the outfit which utilized the magic carpet idea is its failure to run across a broadcasting idea that is entirely new."

But, of a sudden, a brand new idea has popped up.

Instead of originating with the fellow who was once the biggest sponsor on the air, it develops in the camp of a soap company which auditioned yesterday at WEAF, and which is ready to start a series as soon as arrangements can be completed.

The new series will parade several times a week under the title of "First Nights with the Gibson Family."

From this you may guess that the Gibsons will be a theater-going ensemble. But the shows they will see and hear will be originals.

ORIGINALITY

The music and the books will have been written—and copyrighted—exclusively for that series. And incidentally, any other broadcast which uses one of the songs, will have to credit the soap company.

The new entertainment is the first to be able to boast that it is borrowing neither from the stage nor screen, nor is it copping the stuff of tin pan alley, or the old masters.

It has employed Courtney Ryley Cooper to write the books, and the team of Howard Dietz and Arthur Schwartz who penned many song hits for the cinemas for turning out the tunes.

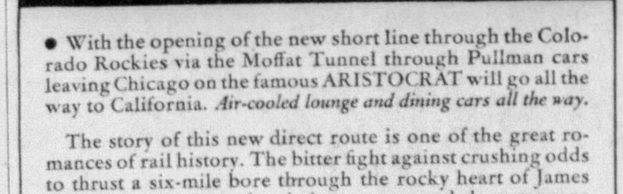
ARISTOCRAT THRU PULLMANS NOW DIRECT to California

THRU THE MOFFAT TUNNEL



• With the opening of the new short line through the Colorado Rockies via the Moffat Tunnel through Pullman cars leaving Chicago on the famous ARISTOCRAT will go all the way to California. Air-cooled lounge and dining cars all the way.

The story of this new direct route is one of the great romances of rail history. The bitter fight against crushing odds to thrust a six-mile bore through the rocky heart of James Peak; the spanning of turbulent waters and deep canyons in the winning of a new short way to the Pacific Coast—all make a mighty modern drama of human achievement.

A trip to California this summer over the new route (at the new reduced fares, both rail and Pullman) will give you thrills that you'll never forget. It reveals parts of the Rocky Mountains heretofore seen only by the miners, hunters, trappers.

Boggs & Buhl takes this means of thanking the many thousands who entered the 65th Anniversary-Ford contest.

The contest achieved its main objective. It made the public Boggs & Buhl conscious. It brought to the public mind an old and trusted institution that dared to be different—that dared a huge undertaking.

It brought thousands to our store who had never been inside our doors. It brought back old friends who had not shopped here in many years. And, just as hoped, the New Boggs & Buhl was a revelation to thousands.

We are especially grateful to the public for wholehearted co-operation in answering the questionnaires. The information has immense value to us in the conduct of our business. It will help us become an even better store.

On the threshold of our 66th year we anticipate great undertakings that will keep our store alive in the public mind, not only because we are one of Pittsburgh's good stores, but, as well, one of its most modern and aggressive stores.

CAR TRUSTEE O. K. SOUGHT

Federal Judge R. M. Gibson set July 12 for a hearing to determine whether the appointment of Attorney George D. Wick, F. N. Hoffstot and W. A. Bonitz as trustees of the Pressed Steel Car Company, shall be permanent. The court directed that notices of the meeting be sent creditors and stockholders of the company. The alternative will be restoration of assets and property to the same men as receivers.

The court also authorized the trustees to pay $10,275, due July 1, as interest on bonds issued by the Illinois Car and Equipment Company, a subsidiary of the Pressed Steel Car Company and payment of $12,486.16 for taxes in Cook County, Ill., on real estate of the Pressed Steel Car Company, of Illinois, a subsidiary.

PLAN VISIT TO GERMANY

Frederick Lohstoeter, instructor in German at Peabody High School, and his wife, Dr. Lottie Lohstoeter, of the University of Pittsburgh, Friday will sail from New York for Germany, where they will spend the summer at their old homes. They intend to spend it during their vacation.

Mrs. Lohstoeter was the first grandmother to receive a doctorate at the University of Pittsburgh. Her husband received a degree of master of arts at the same institution. They live at 119 North Aiken avenue.

CITY VICE AND RACKET SQUAD ABOLISHED BY WHEELER

COUNCIL KEEPS RIGHT TO JUDGE BANK LOANS

Act Giving 3 Right To cut Security on Deposits Blocked

Any concessions to persons whose names appear on notes owing to the Pennsylvania Trust Company and whose promises to pay have been posted as security for the city's deposit of $1,047,866 in that bank, will have to be approved separately by City Council.

A resolution making it possible for the City Treasurer, City Solicitor and Controller to make settlements for less than the face value of the obligations was blocked yesterday in Council.

Two efforts to amend the bill to satisfy opposition failed. An amendment which would have added the Mayor to the group of city officials with the power to pass on settlements and made Council the deciding body in case of disagreement, was stopped, four to four.

MANY LOANS TO POLITICIANS

Those against were: John J. Kane, William A. Magee, William J. Soost and P. J. McArdle. Those in favor were Walter R. Demmler, Thomas J. Gallagher, John M. Huston and Robert Garland.

The same vote was registered on an amendment which would have only added Mayor McNair to the officials empowered to act.

Council plainly approached with great caution the measure which would involve the possible writing-down of many notes, including those of politicians who had made loans at the bank.

Among those whose names appear on notes held by the closed bank are Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic leader; Walter Bonitz, manufacturer; Theodore L. Moritz, secretary to the Mayor, and Benjamin L. Steinberg, former assistant city solicitor.

INTRODUCTORY INDORSER

Assistant City Solicitor Thomas M. Benner, who is an indorser on several notes, had brought the proposal for the settlement arrangement into Council.

He appeared in Council yesterday with City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully and stated that the Commonwealth, through the Deputy Attorney General, had asked that the city authorize its officials to make settlements in order to speed up the work.

Councilman Soost, who has opposed the resolution from the start, declared it would be better for Council to do nothing and let debtors be sued and pay what they were able.

New Bank Opens Doors As Predecessor Pays

Simultaneous with payment of a 59 per cent dividend to depositors of the closed Real Estate Savings and Trust Company, of North Side, within the next 10 days, the new North Side Deposit Bank will open its doors for business.

Twelve thousand four hundred and sixty-six depositors will receive $1,378,925, the amount represented by the 59 per cent dividend made possible by a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The Deposit Bank is the result of a reorganization of the old bank which went into the hands of receivers November 16, 1932.

Application also has been made to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for membership, according to Edward A. Young, vice president of the new bank.

A. V. Purnell, a contractor, is president of the new institution. Raymond G. Geltz is treasurer and Stanley Crowe, secretary.

Directors are Mr. Purnell, Herman P. Brandt, John E. Joos, Dr. Charles S. Textor, Harry H. Hipwell, E. O. Long, Walter E. Ahlers, Allison S. Moorhead, James M. Duncan, Henry J. Voegtly and Edward A. Young.

West Penn Hospital Directors Re-elected

Re-elected directors of the West Penn Hospital include Wilson S. Arbuthnot, John S. Craig, A. Rex Flinn, John G. Frazer, Mrs. J. Garfield Houston, Albert J. Logan, and James R. Mellon. All begin another three-year term today. At the board's annual meeting yesterday receipts were reported approximately the same as expenditures, $558,000.

M'NAIR PRESENT AT TAXICAB HEARING

They Won't Get Far, Mayor Comments In Stage Whisper

Mayor William N. McNair took an active part as a spectator at a Public Service hearing on the Zone Cab Corporation's application for permission to operate a fleet of cabs here today.

In a stage whisper, the Mayor remarked to his neighbor during the hearing:

"They're not going to get very far with this case."

The hearing was held before Public Service Commissioner Herman J. Goldberg, of Wilkes-Barre. Assistant City Solicitor John J. Kennedy also was a spectator, explaining he was neither for nor against the granting of a charter, but was in attendance merely "to ask questions."

TESTIFIES ON RATES

Harry W. Dolton, of Cleveland, who described himself as president and general manager and one of the incorporators of the Zone Cab corporation, testified to charges contemplated by the company. The rates to be charged, he said, were 10 cents for the first 2-3 mile and 10 cents for each additional 2-3 mile.

He was cross-examined by Attorney Charles Robinson for the Parmelee Company concerning the topography of Pittsburgh. His lack of knowledge of Pittsburgh conditions prompted Commissioner Goldberg to remark:

"He's giving the wildest conjectures."

READY TO OPERATE

In his opinion, the commissioner declared, Dolton was not qualified to estimate mileage in Pittsburgh.

Another witness was Elmer Baker, who testified he had 22 years' experience in the taxicab business in Pittsburgh and Cleveland, but had been out of the business since 1931.

Dolton testified that his company proposed to place 100 cabs in operation immediately if granted a charter and within six months, he said, the company would provide 200 more cabs.

RECALLED TO STAND

Dolton, recalled to the witness stand after the noon recess, was asked about drivers' salaries.

He explained the company's system of paying the drivers 50 per cent of their "book"—the total day's receipts. Out of this, he said, the driver must pay for his gasoline, which brings the percentage down to about 39 per cent.

Dolton explained that in Cleveland the average driver's book is $16 a day. He declared the company would employ about 250 men, working them on eight hour shifts.

Questioned about insurance, he declared, he knew of one "old-line" casualty company who would write fire, theft, property damage and public liability on the cabs.

Mayor McNair went out for lunch and did not return for the afternoon session.

3 POLICE HELD AT SWISSVALE

Charged with conduct unbecoming officers, three suspended Swissvale policemen will be given a hearing before the Swissvale Council police committee this week.

They are Patrolman John Corry, Sub-Patrolman William Dillinger and Acting Lieut. James Hanna.

According to W. J. Brisbin, chairman of the police committee, Hanna, off duty, appeared intoxicated at the Swissvale Police Station the morning of June 17 with a resident of the community and entered a cell occupied by a Negro woman. Dillinger was in charge at the time, Brisbin said.

Corry was suspended, according to Brisbin, because he took Hanna to Braddock, where he is alleged to have bought more liquor.

VET HOSPITAL HEAD PROMOTED

Dr. Henry Rolph Brown, commander of the United States Veterans' Hospital at Aspinwall has been promoted to chief of all veterans' tuberculosis hospitals in the country and will take up his duties in Washington Saturday, it became known today.

With the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the Medical Corps, Dr. Brown had charge of Base Hospital No. 94 in France during the World War. He established a veterans' hospital at Rutland, Mass., prior to coming here nine years ago when he put into operation the Aspinwall institution.

In his new post he will have charge of about 50 hospitals housing from 40,000 to 50,000 veterans. His successor here was not named. His home is in Providence, R. I.

'Dillinger' Net Spread in Erie For Loose Lion

ERIE, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—Well, they're still at it, those lion-hunters around Erie.

And the dragnet which the police had out for John Dillinger—the one with the nice embroidered edges—is being turned to the more utilitarian object of capturing a nice fireplace rug which is not ready yet to become a nice fireplace rug.

Maybe there's not even a fireplace in Erie which needs a nice lion skin rug but, anyhow . . .

The trail of the eminent lion who is causing all the excitement got a little hotter (or should it be a little colder?) last night after three Greenville (Pa.) men reported hearing "loud roars" on a road near Erie. They said the alleged "roars" disturbed their slumbers.

Their report sort of backed up a statement from Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hautt on the preceding night that they saw a rabbit on their front lawn.

Now, it is not that the Hautts object to rabbits on their front lawn but, they said, the rabbit happened to be in the aforementioned lion's mouth. And they do object to lions cluttering up their landscaping, so they notified the police.

Then the police started out on the spoor of the lion. (Pun: S'poor lion that leaves no spoor.) So far, however, they have been unable to catch up with it—the lion, that is, not the spoor. They believe it is one which escaped recently from a circus near Erie.

Insurance Company Holds Annual Outing

Employes of the Reliance Life Insurance Company were to hold their annual picnic at Burke Glen, William Penn highway, today. A beauty parade and athletic contests were scheduled.

THEFT SUSPECT WAITS HEARING

Suspected of taking $4,500 cash from the deathbed pillow of a friend, Lawrence Bodzoick, alias Boden, 60, proprietor of the Dew Drop Inn, Morning, was released on $10,000 bond pending a hearing before Alderman Thomas M. Geary, Saturday.

Mrs. Agatha Grulk, 40, of 1816 Jane street, charged he stole the money from John Bronek, her uncle. A widowed mother of five children, she is administratrix of the estate.

Charles Boden, Budzoick's son, who was arrested when detectives found gambling paraphernalia in the inn, was held under $2,000 bond. Budzoick also faces gambling charges.

JUDGES 'GOATS' AT DINNER

A dozen dignified judges stripped off their coats, ate a steak and quaffed a beer, then laughed merrily as District Attorney "Andy" Park stabbed right and left at the whole Criminal Court "gang" at the annual gridiron luncheon this year given for Judge W. Hebel Dithrich, who is retiring as presiding jurist of Criminal Court.

More than 300 men and women, all connected in some way with the court, gathered in the Plaza restaurant yesterday. They held their sides when austere Judge Frank P. Patterson was presented with "a racket of his own" from the "Three Toms" in the form of a tennis racquet. They laughed still louder when the District Attorney unwrapped a small square building for Mayor McNair, saying it was McNair manor. Then there was more excitement when the tom cat presented to Judge "Tom" Marshall by the "Three Toms" almost got away.

A telegram from the prisoners in the county jail asking the County Commissioners to install a toll system on the Bridge of Sighs, from the jail to the Courthouse, heightened the merriment and the presentation of a subscription to "Good Housekeeping" to Mrs. R. Templeton Smith struck a popular chord.

Then Park handed out a private telephone line to McNair, saying it ran direct to Mrs. Pinchot in Harrisburg, and was presented by the taxpayers to save telephone tolls. Alderman John Verona presented Judge Schoonmaker with "the whitewash brush used in the election cases" and Judge M. A. Musmanno, whose flowing locks are legion, was presented with hairpins by the lady jurors.

The only serious gift was a handsome leather suitcase presented to Judge Dithrich by the banqueters.

CHIEF SLEUTH SHAKES UP BUREAU

Ben Marshall's Pet Raiding Crew Ditched

Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall's vice and racket squad, a troublesome branch of the Detective Bureau, today was abolished by the new inspector of detectives, Sam Wheeler.

Wheeler announced the elimination of the squad while Marshall is absent because of sickness.

Marshall set up the squad two months ago and placed Frank Boyd, former inspector of detectives, in charge, with orders to report directly to the superintendent. This so stirred Louis Leff, who was then inspector of detectives, that he threatened to resign.

Under Boyd the squad was in charge of raids against numbers joints and race-track gambling rooms.

Inspector Wheeler described the squad as "not necessary."

He added that specialists were not necessary in the bureau, that the work could be done by the bureau as a whole.

RETAIN POSITIONS

The three sleuths who worked under Boyd, who himself recently resigned from the force to go on pension, were Stewart Dapp, personal friend and appointee of Mayor McNair; Charles Brubauch and Andrew Carciere. They retain their positions in the bureau.

Wheeler today was scheduled to attend a meeting with Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell, Acting Police Supt. Jacob Dorsey and all police inspectors, at which an effort will be made to eliminate the traditional bad feeling between policemen and detectives. One step will be to give policemen deserving credit for any arrests which are turned over to the sleuths.

Meanwhile Director Bell carries on an investigation into the personnel of the Police Bureau as the result of information furnished by the Police Research Commission.

He met with the commission in a closed session yesterday afternoon in the office of Dr. A. I. Wise, chairman, in the Aronson Building.

IDENTITY OF "FIXER"

The commission, it is reported, has learned the identity of the "fixer," mentioned recently in the testimony of Thomas J. Cavanaugh, former police officer, who gained a reputation for his raids.

The "fixer" is not connected with the city administration, according to Cavanaugh. The commission may call him as a witness at one of the later sessions, it has been revealed.

Director Bell is reported well along in an investigation of why Inspector Jerry Deasy was transferred from Oakland to East Liberty. He is reported as declaring himself impressed with the accuracy of some of the information which has been furnishd him by the commission.

According to statements at a hearing of the commission last week by James N. Hoey, former police inspector, the inmates of a well-known house of ill repute in Oakland boasted they would have Inspector Deasy removed if he did not remove a police guard from before the door of the establishment.

Later Deasy was moved. According to Hoey, an official police car was seen in front of the house on three successive nights.

In order to give Director Bell time to further work on his own investigation, the commission will postpone the open hearing scheduled for Friday to one week from that date.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 27. To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph: Congressmen coming dragging in from Washington, some of 'em look like they had hitch-hiked.

Will Rogers

Now their real work starts, that is trying to get elected this fall. I tell you it's no easy life when you consider that battle to get back there. I just don't know what they are going to promise the voters this fall, this is a tough time to think up something new. About a man's only chance is to just say, "Well boys, I dont know what I will do, I will just have to wait till I get there and see what Mr. Roosevelt wants. He knows more about it than me."

Yours. WILL.

Tammany Hall Looks for Leader Without a Past

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Tammany Hall is like the Republican party these hot days. It's looking for a leader with a future instead of a past.

There was a time in politics when a man would stand up there on the plank rostrum and tell all about himself, everything he had done and what he intended doing.

Now, you must have a leader who hasn't any more record than a fresh laid egg.

Instead of being a friend to the people, he has to be a stranger to them.

They don't want any more bargains in used leaders and second-hand politicians.

So, if you are a man with an iron heel, you had better learn to walk on your toes.

DIRECTOR JIBES STUBENRAUCH

"He doesn't seem to have a leg to stand on in this case."

That is what Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell said of Patrolman Herman Stubenrauch, who probably will appear before the Police Trial Board today in connection with his latest outburst.

Stubenrauch has had a stormy career as a policeman. His gun play has brought especial condemnation and dismissal. He is said to have drawn a gun on two men last Saturday, struck a county policeman and attempted to kick Alderman Len Dyer, a cripple.

Woman Here 62 Years Seeks Citizenship

Mrs. Catherine McMahon, 77, of 25 Woodville avenue, a resident of this country 62 years, has made application for American citizenship. Accompanied by her daughter, Miss Anna McMahon, she visited the office of W. W. Wiggins, director of naturalization and immigration in the Pittsburgh district, to file her first papers. Attaches of the office said she was the oldest person who ever sought to obtain citizenship at the naturalization office here.

She was married to John McMahon at Kilmore, Ireland, April 28, 1872, and soon emigrated to the United States, arriving in New York five weeks later. Her husband died September 5, 1910.

Mrs. McMahon, who is four feet ten inches tall and weighs 175 pounds, has resided in the Pittsburgh district nearly all the time since coming from her native country.

Wife Likened to Snake, Wins Divorce

Tearful testimony that her husband said he "would just as soon sleep with a snake" yesterday marked divorce action of Mrs. Hazel D. Jackson, of 814½ South Braddock avenue, against Lloyd E. Jackson, chemist.

In addition to comparing her with a reptile, Jackson drank excessively, forced her to take trips to Kansas and California and admitted to being out with another woman after telling her he was going on a trip for a few days, Mrs. Jackson told the court.

She testified her troubles began in 1929—12 years after the couple's marriage. They separated last December, she said.

GARLAND URGES INCINERATOR BILL VETO

The legislation for the erection of incinerators at the Brilliant pumping station, Highland Park, and at Chateau and Reedsdale streets, North Side, is now on the desk of Mayor McNair.

He said some time ago that he would sign the bills, as the incinerator problem was entirely up to Council. Recently, however, under pressure from delegations of protesting citizens, he has hinted at vetoes.

Council President Robert Garland, who voted against both sites, last night urged the Mayor to veto the bills.

IN VERBAL BATTLE

Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston, one of the Mayor's closest advisors, got into a rough and tumble verbal battle when he appeared before Council yesterday to protest against the Brilliant location.

Councilman John J. Kane declared it was "absolutely ridiculous" for city department heads to object to the incinerator site.

Johnston inquired if Council wanted "yes men" for department heads, and Kane retorted:

"No, I don't want a department head to say 'yes' and I don't want you to come in here and talk that way to me, either."

BIGGER GIVES WARNING

Johnston closed his visit by telling Council he hoped the Mayor will veto the incinerator bills.

Health Director Ray P. Moyer, whom the Mayor asked to appear with Johnston to ask Council to withdraw the legislation, failed to show up.

Frederick Bigger, chairman of the City Planning Commission, told Council a serious traffic condition would be created at Washington and Allegheny River boulevard if the Brilliant site is approved.

COCKTAILS TOP GAY DIVORCE

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—A cocktail party between Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Strotz celebrated their divorce, which lacks only formality of a signature to make it final.

Mrs. Maxine Stresenrueter Strotz, socialite, recited before the court that her polo-playing broker husband had been cruel.

After the Judge indicated yesterday the decree would be signed and a $200,000 financial settlement was agreed to, Robert Cantwell, Jr., Mrs. Strotz' attorney, called up the husband to ask would he please join Mrs. Strotz, her sister, and himself at cocktails. Cantwell said the party was a success.

Max Baer's Own Story of His Life and Loves---Exclusive!

Off in the Grand Manner to Box Ernie Schaaf In New York and Press His Suit For Hand of Dorothy Dunbar.

MY LIFE AND LOVES—By Max Baer
World Heavyweight Boxing Champion.

CAPTER X.

When I got back to Oakland and talked to J. Hamilton Lorimer, one of my managers, about getting me a fight in New York, he said he was too busy with his business affairs and he would leave it to Ancil Hoffman, my other manager, to get me future bouts, and let him handle my affairs.

That sounded great to me. Ham and I hadn't hit it off very well while he was my sole manager, and we had had some arguments as to how much money was due me. I generally had figured more for myself than Ham had handed me, and he explained the difference by "overhead"—if he explained at all.

So I went to see Ancil, who now, by agreement with Ham, was the active manager, and told him I'd like to fight in New York. I especially stated "Madison Square Garden," because I was aiming to make good on every boast to Dorothy Dunbar who, by that time, had returned to New York.

Gets a Chance at Ernie Schaaf

There was still considerable bitterness toward me in California, and there was still plenty of agitation to have me barred all over the country—and for life. My return to Oakland stirred up the "Killer" stories again, and I became fidgety, especially when there was a report out that the California Commission would ask the other commissions to join with them in my one-year suspension. But that didn't happen.

Ancil began angling with Madison Square Garden, and was offered a shot against Ernie Schaaf, of Boston. That was when Ernie was going great, had beaten a lot of good men and the fellows with championship ambitions were keeping shy of him.

"Want to fight Schaaf?" asked Ancil one day.

"Sure—a dozen Schaafs."

"All right; I'll have them send the articles for signature. You against Schaaf, Madison Square Garden, New York, December 19 (1930.)"

Deeply in Love—and Broke

Boys, I did 12 flip-flops! New York! Madison Square Garden! Dorothy! But a few little jobs had to be performed before I could make good all of my boast. I had a chauffeur and I had a car, but it was an old buzzard and wouldn't do for driving up to Dorothy's house in New York.

I needed a secretary and I needed clothes—plenty of clothes. I had been reading books on what fashionable men are supposed to wear, and I meant to be 100 per cent fashionable. I had no money; my credit was a little strained here and there; but I was in love, and you know about a fellow in love and how little obstacles mean when he wants to go a-courting his lady love.

"We're leaving in one week," said Ancil, who is a great, great pal, even though he hops on a soap box and gives me lectures even now about the evils of too much vino and too many girls.

Loads Up With Swell Clothes

"Okay! I'll be seeing you in a week," I said, and skipped along.

The first thing I did was to order 12 suits. The tailor eyed me a little suspiciously and asked a little about where I'd get all the money to pay for them. But I told him who I was—the great Max Baer, a cinch to be the champion, a cinch to make millions.

"I'll be paying you some day," I said. "But I shouldn't. Do you realize what an 'ad' it is to you to have people know I w r your clothes?"

My sales talk was swell—and a winner.

Next I loaded up with scenery—hats, shoes, shirts, ties—all the trimmings—using the same system. Then I stepped around to see the sales agency for one of the swellest and most expensive automobiles and said:

"I want a 16-cylinder."

"Yes; that'll cost so much," they told me.

Makes Chauffeur His Secretary

"I've an old car—want to trade that in. Make me an estimate." They did. I was several hundred short of what was needed for payment No. 1. Well, I rustled up that money—and a fine 16-cylinder car was mine, with delivery to be made in New York.

"I need a secretary now," I said to Alden Humphries, my chauffeur, an ambitious young fellow whom I had kept dolled up in a uniform that was gaudier than that of a Russian Grand Duke.

"How about me?" asked Alden. "I know all about social secretarying."

"Okay," I said. "You're hired. I'll raise your pay later on."

"I could use some of my back pay as chauffeur now," he replied.

"So could I. Say, do you want to be the social secretary of the great Max Baer, or do you want me to leave you in California while I go to New York?"

"You win," he said. "But I surely could use 10 bucks."

I dug up a $20 bill for him and for a while he thought it a counterfeit.

"Your first job," I told him, "is to arrange with the automobile people to hire a chauffeur for me in New York and have my car and the chauffeur meet my train upon arrival in New York."

A few days later my suits were ready, but I ran up against a new difficulty. I needed trunks—and they had to be new. I remembered about a fellow in the trunk business who was a fight fan. Thirty minutes of explaining what a cinch I was to win the title—and the trunks were mine. He had an "I. O. U."

Financing yourself isn't tough if you just learn how.

"Okay; I'm all set to go," I said to Ancil the next morning—his first sight of me in four days.

"Oh, it's you, is it?" asked Ancil without surprise. "I was just about to call off the trip, thinking you were in jail somewhere. We leave tomorrow. Don't trip over your ears and miss the train."

We were off—Ancil and Mrs. Hoffman; Frankie Burns, my trainer, and his wife; my secretary—and six trunks belonging to me. Boy, were those trunks loaded with scenery! I never met this guy Beau Brummell, but he was a cinch to run no better than second to me.

I was on my way to New York, with clothes enough to make me a fashion plate, a secretary at my beck and call, a 16-cylinder car and a chauffeur waiting—all of it planned and worked out to help me win Dorothy Dunbar as my wife.

MAXIE BLOWS HIS OWN HORN IN PARADE WELCOMING HIM T O ASBURY PARK (N. J.), WHERE HE TRAINED FOR TITLE BOUT

ALL CARNEGIE AT NEW BRIDGE DEDICATION

All Carnegie turned out in gala array this afternoon for the dedication of the new $90,000 concrete bridge over Chartiers creek.

A parade headed by the Carnegie High School band moved through the principal streets to the scene of the ceremony, participating were county and borough officials, members of the school board and honor guests.

Following the dedication an automobile parade was to complete the festivities.

AMONG SPEAKERS

Attorney James H. Duff was master of ceremonies. Among the speakers on the program were County Commissioners C. M. Barr and William D. Mansfield; Burgess J. Kelso Nickel and State Senator Frank J. Harris.

Gen. Thomas E. Morgan cut the ribbon that marked the formal opening of the span to traffic. A speakers' stand had been erected in the middle of the structure.

The new span, 300 feet long with a 38-foot driveway and 18-foot sidewalks, is the fourth structure to span Chartiers Creek, the first having been a wooden covered bridge built 100 years ago.

MOVED UPSTREAM

The covered span was replaced by a two-arch steel span. It in turn was succeeded by a single arch steel bridge in 1886. The latter, which had been in use since that time, was moved upstream 100 feet last fall to permit work on the new concrete structure.

The bridge was built by the John F. Kunz Company, of Pittsburgh, under supervision of Thomas Halsey, county director of public works, and his staff. In so far as possible all materials used in construction were purchased in Allegheny County.

Goldman Named National Director

David H. Goldman, president of the Retail Credit Men's Association of Pittsburgh, has been made a director of the National Retail Credit Association, a telegram from Memphis, where the organization held its convention, announced.

WIFE ACCUSES MAN OF BIGAMY

A complicated divorce hearing was begun before Judge George V. Moore today when Mary Kuchta, of Main street, Sharpsburg, appeared and testified that when she returned to Sharpsburg from an elopement to Wellsburg, W. Va., with Andrew Palarski, of Eleventh street, she learned that he had another wife living in Sharpsburg.

Mrs. Mary Kuchta Palarski testified she never lived with Palarski, stating that she went to the home of her parents immediately after the elopement. She said it was a short time later that she learned her husband had another wife with whom he was living. The hearing was continued until witnesses identify Palarski as one individual who married the two women.

Teeny Phillips of 1215 Webster avenue, one time a winner of marathon dances, was a witness in the case.

HEART SEWING NEAR SUCCESS

LANCASTER, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—George Hampton has "a mighty good chance" to be the man who was stabbed in the heart and lived to tell about it.

Physicians at the hospital where a surgeon lifted the heart from its place and closed a stab wound with two stitches Sunday night make that optimistic forecast.

Hampton's pulse—imperceptible when he was wheeled into the operating room three days ago—beats stronger each hour as the medical profession keeps close watch on another unique case in the annals of surgery.

The patient, an obscure barber before a paring knife thrust charged against the housekeeper sent him dying to the daring hands of Dr. John L. Atlee, Jr., 30, was reported spending a "very restful" night last night.

Mrs. Myrtle Dorwart, the housekeeper, is in jail.

Actor Jobless, Wife Says in Divorce Suit

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—(AP.)—Wheeler Oakman's "prospects for the future are not bright," the actor's wife, Frances, told the Superior Court at a hearing to determine what fee her counsel should receive in prosecuting her divorce action, scheduled for trial next month.

RFC CHANGES COMMERCIAL LOAN PLAN

Coincident with the announcement of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's new policy of making commercial loans directly through the Federal Reserve Banks, it was learned today that the original RFC plan had failed in Pittsburgh.

Since last summer, more than 75 applications for industrial and commercial loans were made here to the RFC, according to a source close to the Freehold Bank, which was selected as the local RFC agent.

"Very few" actual loans have been made in that time, one official of the bank said, explaining:

"The applications had to pass through a good many agencies on their way to Washington. The government wanted to help industry by making available credit said to be withheld by large banking institutions who didn't feel able to take on the obligations."

Under the new government lending setup, business houses seeking loans from the RFC during the next six months must make application direct to the Federal Reserve Bank at Cleveland, O.

ENVOY DENIES SANDINO PLOT

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—The State Department today had issued a formal statement by Arthur Bliss Lane, American minister to Nicaragua, denying rumors that he approved or instigated the assassination of Gen. Augusto Cesar Sandino, Nicarguan insurgent leader, near Managua last February 21.

Lane said "unfounded and malicious rumors have been circulated, both in Nicaragua and elsewhere, to the effect that certain acts committed in Nicaragua in February last, were approved and instigated by me," and added:

"During the past week, however, these rumors have been circulated with increased intensity and have apparently created an impression in some quarters that I was endeavoring to influence political developments in Nicaragua.

"I desire to state in the most categorical manner that these rumors and any such impression are absolutely false."

HOOVER BUYS BIG TRACT

LOS ANGELES, June 27—(AP.)—Former President Herbert Hoover, his son, Allan Hoover, and J. O. Hayes, Jr., are permitted to consummate purchase of 3,678 acres of San Joaquin County land from California Delta Farms, Inc., under a ruling of Superior Judge Emmet Wilson yesterday, denying an injunction sought by Henry Boomsma, stockholder of the corporation.

Boomsma charged Lee A. Phillips, one of the corporation's directors, met Mr. Hoover and was so flattered by the association, besides expecting the former President eventually would show his appreciation, that he agreed to sell the property for $50 an acre. This price, Boomsma contended, was far below the actual market value. He asserted also Phillips so dominated the board of directors that its approval of the deal was not really the act of the corporation.

Reprieve Granted Toledo 'Executioner'

COLUMBUS, O., June 27.—(INS.)—A 60-day reprieve was granted by Gov. George White today to Joe (Wops) English, alleged executioner for the notorious Toledo Licavoli gang, who was scheduled to have been put to death in the electric chair at Ohio Penitentiary today.

The reprieve was granted, Gov. White announced, in order that the records and affidavits submitted to him in connection with the case might be more carefully examined and to allow time for the apprehension of other suspects who are still at large.

12 Dead in French Ferryboat Ramming

LORIENT, France, June 27.—(INS.)—Twelve persons were drowned and six injured, according to the latest check today, when a ferryboat carrying 100 arsenal workers was rammed in Lorient harbor by a rival ferryboat and sank.

Some of the drowned were trapped in the ship's cabin, from which others were rescued by volunteers from the docks who dived and entered the enclosure, which still contained some air.

Children Warned Of Traffic Dangers

Children were cautioned against the dangers of automobile traffic during the vacation season today by Dr. R. M. Sherrard, associate superintendent of Pittsburgh schools, and the Rev. Paul E. Campbell, head of the parochial schools of the Pittsburgh diocese. Both sent out letters to principals at the request of the Western Pennsylvania Safey Council urging extra precaution while the pupils are out of school.

NRA MEDIATOR IN CLAY STRIKE

KITTANNING, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—Strikers at the Continental Clay Products Company are considering a National Labor Board proposal for settlement of a walkout involving 125 employes of the company.

The proposal provides "recognition" of a committee of the employes, regardless of union affiliations; payment of minimum NRA wages, and reinstatement of workers who picketed during the strike.

Harry Laird, president of the Brick Workers' Union local in Kittanning, announced yesterday he has received the plan from A. C. Jewett, executive secretary of the Labor Board.

JUSTICE TO GET NEW TRIAL IN FALL

Justice of the Peace James J. Westwood of McKees Rocks and two constables will be retried for trial early next fall on charges of a conspiracy to defraud the county of $5,000 in fictitious costs.

This developed today following the refusal by Judge Elder W. Marshall to grant Westwood's motion for a judgement on the record.

Westwood and the two constables, Thomas Drexler and William E. Meissner, were placed on trial two months ago, but four days after the trial opened evidence of alleged jury tampering developed and Judge Marshall declared a mistrial. Counsel for the justice wanted the court to decide the case on the record, which the court refused today.

Westwood was acquitted last week of alleged jury fixing in connection with his first trial. James Conno, county truck driver, is serving six months on the same charge involved in the mistrial.

TITLE OF MAE'S FILM BANNED

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—(AP.)—The film cutters' shears will slash Mae West's latest motion picture in answer to the cry for cleaner productions. Another screen feature has been abandoned.

Paramount headquarters in New York announced Miss West's production, "It Ain't No Sin," would be revised and the title dropped. The New York Film Board has objected to portions of it.

Samuel Goldwyn, pioneer producer, said here that production of his half-million dollar picture, "Barbary Coast," has been postponed. It was to have portrayed the rollicking Gold Coast of San Francisco's early mining days.

Goldwyn said "Barbary Coast" was not a child's story and he would not tamper with it to fit present demands.

Alaskan Rescuers Rewarded by Soviet

Roy W. Smith, executive of the York Engineering Company, which is building the road, said it will be opened to traffic about October 1.

2 Given Long Terms In Store Robberies

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—Two men who admitted theft of $2,500 worth of merchandise from three Uniontown stores, face long terms in the Western Penitentiary.

Huston C. Hernansky, 27, was sentenced for 10 to 20 years, and Joseph Evans, of Greensburg, for five to ten years, after arraignment in Fayette County Court.

Heart Ailment Kills Braddock Child, 3

Three-year-old Virginia B. Jenkins, of 449 Library street, Braddock, died yesterday afternoon in Braddock General Hospital a few minutes after she was stricken while playing in the Scott High School Playground, according to the Coroner's report. A heart ailment was given as the cause.

Here's One Driver Who Knows Hazards

ST. LOUIS, June 27.—(AP.)—Joseph M. White knows all about traffic hazards. His car became entangled with an automobile driven by a Negro, who slashed his arm with a razor. White reentered his car and started for a hospital. Before he got there, his car collided with another automobile. White made the rest of the trip in a police car.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Man About Town

Mrs. Pat Rooney, 3d (Doris Dawson) who is a Renotable, and Nacio Brown, the tune writer, are as affectionate as a San Francisco audience! . . . Mitzi Lang, also in Reno for that well-known "cure," and Alan Floyd, millionaire gold-miner, will have it preachered . . . It's a boy over at the John La Gattas (Florence Olds) . . . Sam Katz, the Paramount-Publixer, probably will be sealed to Mrs. Bell Pottash, a Chicago widow, in July.

The B. F. Sacketts of the Los Angeles Dep't of Justice are threeing for November . . . Ludlow Smith, just melted by Katharine Hepburn, is dizzy over Barbara Child, the socially registered model at Fortnum & Mason's, but she prefers a bank-clerk named Dietrich of Westport . . . Dorothy Dare has Sammy Fain trouble again. She inspired most of his torch tunes . . . Margaret Lindsay of the moompitchers, seems to make Dick Powell forget Mary Brian better than distance . . . Russ Columbo, who not so long ago prayed for a Hollywood job, now is fussing with Universal flickers over his roles . . . Long Island is blazing about Louise Van Alen's soon departure for the old country . . . Will she altar it with Baron De Pantz (I'm not nagging) or does she still love her "ex," Mr. Barbara Hutton?

Hal Skelly sank all his dough in his last theatrical mistake. If Hal hadn't been killed, he would have had to face bankruptcy—such a twist in fate . . . It's male twins over at the William T. Harrises, the attorney. She was Mary Johnson . . . Bonnie Parker (killed with Clyde Barrow) was to be a mother in July . . . If that "con" now a fugitive will write again—attorneys will help.

The ditty: "My Hat's on the Side of My Head" makes you want to warble the wordage to the melody of "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" . . . Of all things! The toughest assignment in H'wood right now is held by the writer who was instructed to make a screen play out of "Sailor, Beware!"—and "take out the sex!" . . . Frances Jones, who is divorcing Wheeler Oakman (because he didn't relish her inability to play bridge) is now taking up the game very seriously, her lawyer being her tutor—ah, me . . . Frank Roeder wants to bet that Lionel Toll is hiding John Dillinger until he can spring two more gags about him . . . General Hugh Johnson's grand crack, viz: "Yes, there's a brain trust—Roosevelt is the brain, and the trust is that of the American people!" sounds like Elinson is his author!

Orchids to Officer Alfred Matthews of the Miller Ave. (Brooklyn) Precinct—because he saw a crazy driver heading for a bunch of school kids, and ran in front of the car to stop it—and now is gravely hurt in a hospital! . . . Orchids to La Hoctor's lovely ballets . . . Scallions to that girl in New York who has a good job and a bank account, but is locally known as the worst form of chiseler. She sent in her own name on Shut-In-Day—and robbed a real shut-in of a bouquet—so cheap is she.

Amusing quip on the coast about the Warner exec. When it was announced that a million smackers would be spent on "Anthony Adverse" one salesman remarked that they'd get that sum back just from the people who started to read the thick book and still want to see how it ends! . . . "Micky" Mack (her real name is Helen McGlynn) is very ill at Bellevue—and her kin or friends should help her.

One famous family frowns on its daughter's cutting up and late hours—the father and his daughter not being such pals, at all, as a result . . . The Edward Chodorovs are infanticipating . . . Helen Vinson has shifted from P. De Cicco, again . . . Sidney Harmon, producer of "Men in White" and "Milky Way," will blend with a New Haven gal soon, or have them? . . . Vivian Porter fell asleep at the wheel and ruined a perfectly good telegraph pole . . . There are 158 million unemployed in China. Now do you feel better?

Add confusing sitch-ee-ay-shuns: The St. Regis Hotel, owned by Doris Duke (the richest girl in the world), has been tossed into receivership to satisfy a five-million mortgage held by V. Astor . . . Poor girl . . . That tree in San Jose on which those kidnapers dangled has been cut down—souvenir hunters became a nuisance . . . Alice Lake, once a $6,000 per week screen name, collapsed on the set the other day, hungry.

Why shouldn't "Beat of My Heart" be popular? It's practically Shubert's "Unfinished Symphony," always a favorite . . . What son of a woolen company official just eloped with a Fifth Avenue store (B. G.) model? . . . Add torrid romances: Ray Hendricks of the Fiorito crew and Betty Grable, the blossinger . . . Wilma Shore (Viola Brothers Shore's daughter) will Mexican her groom, Peter Hancock, this week . . . Add similes: The knife was as sharp as an untipped barber's "goodbye" . . . Free advice to certain screen mag interviewers: It is not "to the manner born"—it is "to the manor born," you dopes . . . A report is that the Fernando Robles (little kidnaped June's folks) are blessed-eventing, again.

Other Days Of Movie Stars

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—Hello! Well, judging from the many letters, you must have liked "I-Wish-I'd-Known-Them When" routine. As long as you like 'em, I'll dish 'em out.

More of the I-wish-I'd-known when:

Miriam Hopkins' agile angles were carrying her along the road to fame as ballet dancer.

Carole Lombard (then Jane Peters) was the fastest sprinter and best high jumper among the girls at Los Angeles High School.

Norman Taurog played stage parts with Mary Pickford, both in child roles.

Kent Taylor worked with an awning company.

Alice White was a script girl for Charlie Chaplin.

Alice Terry was a film cutter at Paramount.

Richard Arlen rode a motorcycle to the studios trying to get work.

Marjorie Rambeau played a banjo and sang in a saloon in Alaska.

Edward G. Robinson wore red tights for a bit in support of Joseph Schildkraut on Broadway.

Edward Arnold, the Frank Morgans and Alexander Leftwich were stranded with a show in New Orleans.

* * *

Just to make New Yorkers feel at home—or would you?—Columbia is planning a thriller to be called "Spring 3100," which, if you haven't called lately, is the telephone number of the big town's police headquarters.

* * *

Snoopings—This probably sounds silly, but Patricia Ellis is burning up 'cause her boy friend was an hour late. He had stopped to watch a house on fire. It was a warm evening all around for him . . . Thelma Todd was actually serenaded the other night by the Bacone College Glee Club, comprising members of 12 different tribes of Indians . . . Al Roth writes from Broadway to say that "things are so bad somebody stole Joe Penner's duck and roasted it!" . . . Alice Lake and Elinor Fair are doing bits in "Broadway Bill," the Hellinger yarn, which Frank Capra is directing.

* * *

Wandering around town—M-G-M hit a new high when kicking in with 30 grand for a short story, "A Lady Comes to Town" . . . Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey are set to do a Broadway show in Sept. for Lawrence Schwab. Incidentally, Bert's heart throb, Patsy Parker, is doing nicely following an appendix operation . . . Young John Murdock, Martha Sleeper's cousin, and sonny boy of J. J. Murdock, has given New York the go-by and will make it permanent in Hollywood. Billy Merrill, a 14-year-old protege of Jessie Bonstelle, gets his movie break in "Peck's Bad Boy," with Jackie Cooper.

* * *

Peeking around the gossipy corners . . . Erich von Stroheim has written a Gypsy love story which he calls "Paprika," and it will soon be served in book form . . . If these fogs continue, Ivan Lebedeff is going to get a windshield wiper for his monocle! . . . I. C. Overdorff is planning a kiddie feature to be captioned "Hollywood Juveniles on Parade" . . . Billie Burke and Dotter, Patricia, have been scampering through the woods at Lake Arrowhead . . . Bud Murray, the dance director, sent out "teaser" invitations to a party to take place July 1, and signed his name backwards, "Dub Yarrum"—and he has EVERYBODY worried in case they didn't figure it out.

Emmett Vogan suggested a certain actor to a casting director, who cracked:

"I thought you said he was a man of regular habits," and Vogan answered: "He is." "Well, he was tight last night!" yelled the casting director. "That's one of his regular habits!" screamed Vogan.

Melodrama

Myrna Loy is co-featured with William Powell and Clark Gable in "Manhattan Melodrama," story of two boys and their strangely opposite lives, opening Friday in the Sheridan Square.

Johnny Flies To Lupe

By HARRISON CARROLL
International News Service Hollywood Correspondent.

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—Once hailed as Hollywood's scrappiest married couple, Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller are now so daffy about each other that they can't stand the briefest separation. The ex-swimming champ hopped a plane to fly to Lupe's side in Chicago.

Only a few days ago, the pair staged an affecting parting as the peppery Mexican star headed east for a week's personal appearances in Chicago and a second week in Detroit. At that time, it was agreed that Johnny stay at home, play golf and represent the family at the prize fights. However, he changed his mind.

"It's too lonesome around here," he told me, "I'm going to grab the first plane out and go to Lupe."

To the amazement of his pals, Johnny expressed himself as temporarily soured on golf. The tall, rangy star, who collected enough swimming medals to fill a case in the family library, is one of the film colony's ace players on the links. He was one of the few Hollywoodites to enter the California Country Club invitational tournament but had the misfortune to draw as his first opponent Guy Hanson, who came out in the number one spot. Johnny was eliminated but it was a close match.

Art Put First By Laughton

Charles Laughton, distinguished English actor who won world tribuate in the title role of the film "Henry the Eighth," chose to play in a stock company "for the experience" when he could have commanded any salary or role he might have wished.

While "Henry the Eighth" was attracting praise all over the world, Laughton and six friends, all English stage stars, joined the repertory company of the Old Vic Theater in London.

They worked an average of 14 hours daily at a salary of $100 a week each, for eight months.

"We felt we had something to learn," Laughton said simply. "So we set about learning it."

Laughton is now engaged in his first American film since being accorded the Motion Picture Academy award for 1933. He plays Norma Shearer's sinister father in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

New Cast Is to Act In Civic Play

This evening's performance of "The Curtain Rises," by B. M. Kaye, will be acted by the touring cast of the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse, in the Arnold School Auditorium. The touring cast will include Patti Littell, Jill Stern, Chalmers Stover, Mary Cheffey, Jules Pross, William Rau, Jr., and Howard Blaine. This cast also will give performances in many surrounding towns after the termination of the week's run. Arthur Marlowe, director, considers this cast as good as the one that received such excellent notices after the opening.

Two Films

Joan Blondell plays opposite James Cagney in "He Was Her Man," one of two films to open tomorrow in the Warner, the other being James Gleason, Edna May Oliver in "Murder on the Blackboard."

Kin of Ernest Hemingway Considers Him Dull

By LLOYD PANTAGES

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—BITS COLLECTED WITHOUT RANSOM: ERNEST HEMINGWAY will probably be THAT happy to know that his cousin, DICK, now in the movies, who by process of elimination has become HEMING instead of HEMINGWAY, considers the brainstorms (novels) of his illustrious relative TOO uninteresting and cannot be BOTHERED reading them . . . GEORGE CUKOR, back in our midst from England, has lost 37 pounds, and he couldn't look better . . . Any time a hostess wishes to be sure that a table is the last word in chicness and propriety she calls FRANTICALLY for BILLY HAINES, who is the foremost authority on such. Will Emily Post be furious?

* * *

The lovely sheen you see on MARLENE DIETRICH'S crowning glory, which gives her a rather angelic aura, is attained by springling odd bits of gold leaf in her fright wig . . . When JOHNNY MACK BROWN greets his friends, instead of the customary 'hello,' he spills out with—"glad to lay my eyes on you suh." Fancy that . . . GLENDA FARRELL cannot talk on the telephone unless she is holding a pencil in her hand so she can caricature the people to whom she is talking . . . JOSEPHINE HUTCHINSON, a young lady now with the Brethern Warner, who supposedly had never made a picture before, ACTUALLY played a role some 22 years ago, in "The Little Princess," starring MARY PICKFORD.

* * *

JOHN STAHL, tis rumored, is the highest-priced director in the industry. He has a longer production schedule than any of the current megaphoners . . . The Cinematographers Association in jolly old Britain, have selected Madame DuBarry, starring that Mexican pippero DOLORES DEL RIO, as the ONLY cinema to present their current convention . . . Boy Scout membership goes out to JOHN BUCKLEY a new Columbian, who discovered a cat monickered "HANSEN" foaming at the mouth. He took it to the veterinarian's and spent THREE HOURS trying to revive the animal, which neverless passed away. Am I sad.

* * *

JOAN CRAWFORD has been trying to have a formal opening for her outdoor dunkery, (outdoor pool to you) but since we have had a group of UNUSUAL weather (fog) she is how seriously considering having it frozen over and turning it into a skating rink. SO sharpen up your skates kiddies.

* * *

'RICARDO COTEZ is the only man who has ever been billed ABOVE GRETA GARBO. The occasion was MISS G'S first picture "The Torrent," in which she was the leading lady, and was unknown to the great American public at that moment. . . The firm of JOHN WANAMAKER in the big city will probably be PLEASED to know that JAMES CAGNEY was once a bundle wrapper in their basement. . . MARY ASTOR became of the cinema by winning SECOND place in a Brooklyn beauty contest, FIRST place went to Corliss Palmer.

All In A Day

By MARK HELLINGER

"To Cherish—"

THEY WERE two very ordinary people. She had a plain unlined face and her hair was yellow and braided in a circle over her neck. He was short and dark and thin, and he had prominent cheek bones. Both of them looked nervous as the Man of God mumbled the words that would make them one for life.

"Do you promise to love, honor and cherish . . . in sickness . . . health . . . poverty . . ."

John Dykes murmured, "I do." When Olga's turn came, she smiled brightly and said: "I do." And afterward, when they were on the train, they waited until no one was looking and then she cuddled close with her feet on the seat under her, and said: "Oh, Johnny. I was so afraid. Getting married is frightening. Isn't it, Johnny?"

And Johnny, who had been even more frightened than she, patted her shoulder and said: "Don't be frightened, Olga. That's all over now. Nothing will ever frighten us again. Our lives are going to be very happy together, Olga. Very, very happy."

And, strangely enough, they were. . . .

All that took place a long, long time ago and they never forgot their marriage vow: "To cherish." They lived in a small town near a huge mill. Their house was low and old. On the sides, boards stuck out like loose corset stays, but you'd forget that if you could see the ivy trellis in the summer.

To Johnny and to Olga, this was not only home. It was a beautiful haven, where their hearts found surcease from worry and trouble. They never wanted to leave that little place, and they never did.

Sometimes, when the weather was warm, they would come out on the porch after dark. If you passed by, you could hear the creak of the rocking chair where Olga sat, and the moan of the hammock bolts where Johnny lay. If they knew you, you'd hear them both say: "Good evenin'." Never anything more than that. They never encouraged friendliness.

In prosperous times, when the mills were going full blast, Johnny got the house patched up and the porch rebuilt. He always worked hard, and saved. Not merely because he was afraid of the future, but also because he dreaded to think that Olga—his Olga!—would ever want for anything.

But in 1907 a money panic occurred and he lost his job. For weeks he worried and fretted and tried to get another job. There were no jobs.

"You're getting thin," Olga said one night at supper. "You worry so, Johnny. Please don't. Look, I'm not worrying. We have each other. Don't you see, Johnny; that's more important. You don't look nice thin, Johnny. Please don't worry."

Johnny smiled and walked around the table. He kissed Olga and grinned.

"The bank money," he said. "I didn't want to say anything. But it's getting low again. I worried about it. But if it hurts you to see me worry, all right. The devil with the money. There!" . . .

John Dykes got a job again when things got better and he worked harder than ever. When the war came, he made more and more money. And he kept piling it into the bank and smiling to think of the years to come.

When Olga's yellow hair first started to turn gray, Johnny started to talk of "harvest time." At first, she didn't understand, but he explained.

"Harvest time," he said, "is just before winter. If you work hard all summer on the farm and you plant well, you reap a good harvest. All our lives we've worked hard. Our harvest is bound to be fine. We've saved and we've lived right. Now, when you get older, we don't have to be afraid. When harvest comes, we'll laugh and play and enjoy life. You see, Olga? That's harvest time."

Olga smiled happily. She said nothing . . .

The depression was seven months old, before they laid Johnny Dykes off. They said it was temporary, but Johnny knew it was forever. He knew he was too old, even if they didn't say so. He knew it was useless to try to get another job; there were too many young, strong men in need of jobs.

For a year, they lived as they had before. He said he wanted to wait to see if the mill would reopen again. And then, after a year of idleness, the second tidal wave of depression hit the world, and the banks fell like paper toys.

Johnny Dykes was back where he began . . .

Strangely enough, he smiled after the first shock had passed. He patted Olga on the shoulder and said that she would never want for a thing as long as she lived.

"Remember," he said, "when we promised to love and cherish? That was long ago, Olga, but we'll never forget it, will we? No, we never will. Never."

He was saying those words—and thinking of something else. Thinking of the fat insurance policy, the only thing left. Thinking of the clauses that took care of practically any type of death. Olga, he kept thinking, will reap the harvest. Fate has been bad, but I will see to it. Olga will reap the harvest.

John Dykes turned on the gas one night and died composed and smiling. He had fooled fate.

But fate is a powerful agency. Fate—and irony. Two days later, Olga died from the shock. And she never saw a penny of the insurance money that had caused her husband to leave this funny world. . . .

TURNS DOWN CENSOR JOB

Speaking of censorship, Eugene L. Connelly, prominent for many years in Pittsburgh's amusement world, has just declined an offer from the Association of Radio Advertisers to become the czar of all advertising going on the air via the National and Columbia broadcasting chains.

It was Mr. Connelly, you may recall, who, several years ago, became the official censor for the Keith vaudeville circuit when the two-a-day was at the height of its power. Mr. Connelly made deletions from the variety acts every Monday afternoon in the Davis Theater, and his official report went to each of the more than 400 managers on the Keith circuit. These managers followed the "clean up" orders implicitly.

Later, when Harry Davis added photoplays to the Davis vaudeville programs, Mr. Connelly, working in conjunction with Mr. Davis and Ted Giles, maintained a rigid watch over the screen entertainment shown in the Davis theaters. Although passed by the censor board, photoplays of an estimated worth of $100,000 at the box office were rejected and shelved.

According to my New York informant, the Association of Radio Advertisers was keenly disappointed when Mr. Connelly declined the post, which, needless to say, carried a healthy financial return. His fame as the official Keith censor brought him nationwide recognition, and the radio advertisers regard him as the ideal man for the position.

Mr. Connelly declined to comment when I told him I knew of the offer, except to say that he didn't want to leave Pittsburgh and that his own publicity, advertising and booking business was doing very nicely.

ANENT THE NEW TALKIES

Your old Pittsburgh friend, Regis Toomey, who has been conspicuous by his absence for sometime, has a role in "Murder on the Blackboard," due in the Warner Thursday . . . This one also has Jimmy Gleason and Edna May Oliver who did so nicely in "Penguin Pool Murder" . . . Myrna Loy, whose real name is Williams, gets co-star billing with William Powell in "The Thin Man," coming to the Penn Friday . . . Miss Loy has cast aside her Oriental vamp parts and has profited greatly by the move . . . James Cagney and Joan Blondell are back together for the first time in two seasons in "He Was Her Man," also due in the Warner Thursday . . . That is, it is the first time they have played together in that time with the exception of their appearance in "Footlight Parade," a musical . . . Miss Blondell, by the way, is still making a serious attempt to have the Warners bill her as Joan Barnes, her married name . . . By a strange coincidence, two of the new pictures cover the same period of time, 1910 to 1932 . . . They are "The Life of Virgie Winters," opening Friday in the Stanley, and "Now I'll Tell," Fulton tomorrow . . . "Virgie Winters," adapted from the Louis Bromfield novel, is one of those "woman's pictures" you hear about, and presents Ann Harding as a small-town milliner whose love life with John Boles is the subject of village gossip and scandal . . . The hobble skirts of 1913 come back in it . . . The high light of "Now I'll Tell" is Spencer Tracy's powerful work in the Arnold Rothstein characterization . . . Robert Gleckler, late of "Broadway," is also in it . . . Frank Craven, former stalwart of the legitimate stage, plays a stool-pigeon in "He Was Her Man" . . . Frank hasn't seen his lovely home in Little Neck, L. I., for six years, his stage and screen work preventing.

WHISPERING GALLERY

The Variety Club, at its Monday luncheon, passed a resolution to present an enscrolled memorial to Mrs. Arthur Flanders, widow of the first active member of the club to die . . . Joe Penner's work for Paramount in "College Rhythm" will net him a cool $75,000 . . . That radio "Voice of Experience," now starting a series of personal appearances, is Dr. M. Sayle Taylor, and he once presented his "sex lecture" show in the old Olympic Theater here . . . The Warners and United Artists have buried the hatchet . . . More than 325 Warner theaters will play United Artists productions during the coming season . . . United Artists "sold away" from Warners during 1933-34 . . . For signing that exclusive screen writing contract with Fox, Damon Runyon got $25,000 and is a guaranteed a minimum of $20,000 for each picture made from one of his stories . . . The real reasons Sam Goldwyn scrapped part of the "Nana" picture was because Warners refused to extend the time Warren William was out on loan to him . . . There was nothing to do but make it over with Lionel Atwill in the part William had been playing . . . John H. Harris was born the same night one of his father's theaters was destroyed by fire . . . Vince Barnett, Pittsburgh and Hollywood's famous ribber, has just been ribbed himself . . . To the tune of $100 for ignoring three speed tickets from the same cop . . . Vince thought it was a rib, but the judge convinced him otherwise when he said one hundred smackos or 15 days in the cooler! . . . There might have been some apologies to Joe Penner for Alice Fay's "Nasty Man" number in "Bottom's Up" . . . And things to look forward to: Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy in Mark Hellinger's "Broadway Bill."

Skate Strap Breaks, Girl Killed by Auto

ELKLAND, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—A weakened strap on a roller skate is responsible for the death of a 14-year-old girl.

Marion Brass was skating near her home, the strap broke and she fell in the path of an automobile, receiving injuries which caused her death soon afterwards. Police exonerated the driver of the automobile, Robert Myers, of Wellsboro.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Jolly, young, likeable Margaret Painter, daughter of the junior C. A. Painters, of Sewickley and Pittsburgh, will be the only debutante to be presented during this month, usually known as the "little season."

Margaret is to be presented this afternoon to society at a tea her parents will give this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in the Allegheny Country Club.

A profusion of gift bouquets—for she's ever so popular—together with ferns, are to decorate the spacious clubhouse.

Will Wear Simple Gown Of White Organdy

Contrasting with the debutante's pale gold sun-tan, her curly, light-brown bobbed hair and her blue eyes, is to be her charmingly simple gown of white organdie and net. She is to carry the gift bouquet from her uncle, William H. Brown, Jr.

Her mother has chosen a beige chiffon-like fabric for her dress and hat this afternoon. Pouring tea and coffee will be Mrs. George G. Henderson, Mrs. Painter's sister-in-law, who winters in California, summers in Sewickley; Mrs. J. P. McKinney, Jr., Mrs. George C. Burgwin, Jr., and Mrs. Cyrus R. Miller.

This evening the Painters will give a dinner for the younger set, to be followed by dancing, honoring their debutante daughter.

The young debutante's chief interest is sports—riding, tennis, golf. She resembles her mother, by the way, strikingly in appearance.

Two Dobbs Ferry classmates of the debutante are here for the event—Marna Brower, of Brooklyn, and Reinette Clark, of Cleveland. They are house guests at the Painters' Sewickley place.

Socks! Socks! NOT the famous pair we've heard on the radio in times past, but excellent socks nevertheless!

Sockiets for the youngsters' romping days! In nice little mesh effects . . . or striped . . . or plain! They won't shrink and shrivel up like too many of their class (being priced 4 pairs for only 90c) . . . they'll wear nobly. All full fashioned . . . in sizes 6 to 10½ . . . and enough color to suit an artist himself! Dark and light . . . some with contrasting fancy cuffs.

* * *

No longer do jaunty picnickers perch precariously on fallen logs and such! Not with the new picnic outfit in evidence. For this contains a little painted table and four stools to match . . . these last with vari-colored canvas tops to make them more comfortable. One of the beauties being that it all folds together into one piece with a handle . . . and can be set into the car conveniently. $3.50 complete.

* * *

Little jewel boxes of perfume in handy vials to poke into a handbag and not spill! The vials fitted into velvet cases! The price being 50c nowadays instead of $1.00 . . . the brand being the well-known R . . . d, whose Sweet Pea, Fragrance, Orchid, Acacia, Rose Geranium, Gardenia and Carnation have long been favorites.

* * *

Women have come and women have gone but apparently the cotton dress situation goes on forever! Anyway . . . one would think so, what with the stores rousing themselves afresh every day or so. The newest of the kind being . . .

The way one of the stores has gone into their stock rooms . . . waved their arms . . . and decreed that each and every frock of such-and-such quality has to bow its head! They've pinned $1.79 . . . $2.79 . . . and $3.98 on them with a "what-the" attitude! And now you and we are going to bring in the sheaves . . . the harvest . . . the bacon . . . or whatyouwill!

For these are cottons of no mean type. Piques . . . seersuckers . . . scatter spots . . . printed voiles . . . lawns . . . eyelets . . . shirtwaist numbers and dressy little jobs! The better to be seen in, my children! The better to take you through a long and sultry Summer! The better to get you all frocked up for hours on end without "ending" your savings account! Sizes 14 to 20 . . . 34 to 44.

* * *

Surprising what some organdie, a bit of lace, and $1.00 will do! One of the stores has proved itself a bright corner in many mothers' lives, by offering organdie frocks AND matching hats for 3 to 6-ers at $1.00!

Both of which you'll love! The frocks being the straight line models with little pleats at the side front . . . with Irish lace medallions set into one type of collar, or ruffles with velvet bows. The colors . . . pink or blue . . . striped, barred, polka-dotted, or flowered. The hats being bonnet style or with floppy brims! Great big dollar's worth!

SARTORIAL RECIPE FOR DUDE RANCHES

By PRUNELLA WOOD

There is lots of color in the outfit, left—maroon cotton shirt, yellow chamois jacket, navy neckerchief dotted with bright yellow, and olive drab Grenfell cloth pants. Black calf boots and a 10-gallon hat.

The jacket and divided skirt sketched center are gray suede with pinked edges. The shirt is blue plaid; the kerchief navy and white.

Blue jeans clothe the nether limbs of the lady alongside. Her shirt is loud red, white, blue and black cotton plaid. Her neckerchief navy and white. All boots sketched have white stitched designs over them.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

GALS WITH a taste for horseflesh on the rolling prairie are getting their return trip tickets to the Bar This-and-That Ranch for the summer. They are practicing rolling their own (using both hands and a carpet sweeper, bellies, unlike their cow-hand friends) and otherwise brushing up their summer roles as riders on the long, long trail.

It is not an expensive choice for recreation, as far as the wardrobe goes. You don't have to Tom Mix yourself to get by dashingly at even the swankest dude ranches; blue jeans, rough riding boots, a couple of shirts (the more gaudy and coarse the better), a supply of neckerchiefs of dime store elegance, and a 10-gallon hat just about completes the picture. Absorbent cotton ribbed underwear of riding cut, lisle and wool socks and some workmanlike gloves cover the accessory list.

* * *

OF COURSE, there are some prime gadgets that any girl can buy if she likes amusing things. The white horse tail fly switch carried by the lady shown standing at the left is such a thing, and so is the 10-foot bull whip that the center lady is fondling. But could keep the flies off with a twig of sage brush, or whatever it is they grow out there, and probably a crack with the same twig would do as much for the average horse as a 10-foot bull with a snake whip—or what do you use a bull whip for or on, anyway?

* * *

KNOWING GIRLS never, never pack skins from frous to these paying guest ranches. They get into sleek riding habits of eastern bridle path persuasion when it is time to dine, and see to it that their linen is immaculate, their ties something superb, and their boots particularly perfect. The same sort of underwear goes for both types of dress, which is a help in packing and budgeting.

Simple cotton frocks of the shirtmaker sort in gingham or seersucker are not frowned on for days when it is pleasanter to lane about in the sun without the co-operation of a horse. They are also quite proper for the informal breakdown at a neighboring ranch of a Saturday night, worn with white shoes and a polo coat wrap.

Miss Olsen One Of Youngest Deans

Dean M. Beatrice Olsen, of the University of North Dakota, who is program chairman for the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, is one of the youngest deans of women in the country. She arrived at her present high place through occupying teaching positions of distinction in her own state, including that of head of the English department and dean of women in the State Normal School at Ellendale. She became secretary of the extension division of the university and assistant professor of English. Since 1926 she has been dean of women and, for the last two years, virtually dean of men.

After receiving her college degree and Phi Beta Kappa at the State University, Miss Olsen took her master's degree at the University of Chicago and later studied at Oxford, England. She has been a member of the Grand Forks Business and Professional Women's Club for 12 years, has done work on the membership and organization committees for her state and has been chairman of the international relations committee.

Dean Olsen thinks her work as dean of women is a school in itself, in which she has had to learn sympathy, tact and willingness to take criticism as well as the value of constant self-appraisement.

Reasons to Expect Upturn

By B. C. FORBES

THINGS WERE somqewhat more cheerful in America's financial metropolis yesterday.

It would be a thousand pities were sentiment to become indigo blue. One inevitable result would be serious shrinkage in security and commodity quotations. Another would be contraction in business and expansion in unemployment. Also, if pessimism continued throughout the year—may heaven forbid!—the United States would be threatened with another revolutionary political upheaval by Washington.

Mr. Forbes

The opinion was expressed here yesterday that the stock market looked as if it had been liquidated almost to a standstill. Says one leading New York Stock Exchange firm, Paine, Webber & Co.:

"Preponderance of influences now affecting security values appear, in our opinion, to lean heavily on the constructive side. Underlying fundamentals, E. G., gold supply and banking reserves, are quite universally recognized as favorable.

"Among additional constructive factors are: (1) Huge sums appropriated by the government (about four billions) to be expended for various purposes, such as public works, direct relief, and drought; (2) rise in farm prices here and abroad, with the disaster of the drought counter-balanced by the $525,000,000 drought relief fund; (3) rationalization of NRA and subsidence of its importance; (4) lapse of authority to license industry under NRA; (5) President's assurances on question of private initiative and the profit motive; (6) Continued strength in commodity-price structure; (7) improvement in the labor and strike situation; (8) relative attractiveness of American investments over European, both for political and monetary reasons; (9) liberalization of securities act of 1933 sufficient to open up a private capital market; (10) stimulative implications of the 'housing act' for home renovation and building (though these facilities may not be availed of until 1935); and (11) greater calm in Washington with both Congress and the Chief Executive on holidays."

NEXT NOTE how much unemployment has been cut down.

The authoritative national industrial conference board finds that the total number of idle workers was reduced 50,000 last month and no fewer than 5,304,000 since March of last year. Today's unemployed are estimated at 7,899,000.

Were an equal number to be absorbed into employment during the coming 12 months, the unemployment problem would be very largely solved.

Under prevailing doubts, fears, hesitancy, it would appear absurd to suggest that another 5,000,000 may find employment by this time next year. That, however, is within the range of possibility.

Most people I meet are eager to help to push the country ahead.

NOTHING PRINTED in this column in many moons has aroused so much editorial comment or attracted so much correspondence as the discussion of the possible effects upon the younger generation of all the paternalism and federal government promises.

Some youths have sense enough to declare that they realize they must fight their own battles and not lazily lean upon Washington or anybody else to provide for them throughout life. Others, very naturaly bitter because of inability to find work, vehemently condemn criticism of Washington's promised bountifulness. Still others dismiss all lauding of old-time virtues such as thrift, industriousness, frugality, ambition, saving as "hooey."

Here is the concluding sentence from a two-column editorial in the Somerset, Pa., Herald:

"We join with Mr. Forbes in apprehending for future generations dregs from cups of bitterness unless there is a stop put speedily to the performances of the crowd in Washington."

WASN'T AMERICA going to be swamped with orders from Russia immediately following "recognition"? Thus far, colossal contracts have been conspicuous only by their absence.

ONE READER, "unemployed," postcards:

"Now we know what the new deal is." He explains:

"I have just come from an exhibition of modernistic art. I asked the young lady in charge for an explanation of one painting. She explained it at great length. But when I asked her just what it means, she replied, 'It is merely an abstraction. It doesn't mean a thing.'"

Comment as you want.

PROFIT-TAKING HALTS GAIN IN STOCKS

NEW YORK, June 27.—The Wall street rainbow dimmed a bit today, but the speculative forces apparently could discern no particularly ominous storm clouds in the market skies.

Stocks resumed their upward push in a rather brisk opening, metal and sugar issues in the lead with gains ranging from 1 to 2 or more points. A number of new highs for the year were established before profit taking cut down the advances. It was noted that the trading volume dwindled appreciably on the moderate realizing.

GRAINS RALLY

Following early hesitancy grains rallied. Wheat got up around a cent a bushel at one time and the other cereals were not far behind. Silver futures developed an improved tone, but rubber and cotton just about held their own. Bonds were relatively quiet. Foreign exchange rates were slightly irregular.

The bluest of the "blue chips," Homestake Mining, jumped about 10 points to another record top at $410 a share. United States Smelting, Dome, Howe Sound, National Lead, McIntyre Porcupine and American Smelting showed advances of fractions to 2 or more points. New 1934 peaks were reached by American Beet Sugar common and Cuban American Sugar preferred, each up in the neighborhood of a point or so. American Beet Sugar preferred advanced 2 and People's Drug, up 4, was at a new year's high.

OTHERS GAIN

Other advances of fractions to around a point or so were recorded by American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, United States Steel, Santa Fe, International Silver, Wilson and Company and Public Service of New Jersey. The coppers, including Kennecott and Magma, were firm. The motors, aircrafts and alcohols were fairly steady.

The recent strength of some of the metals was attributed to an undercurrent of inflationary psychology, which still persists in some brokerage circles. Most traders, however, continued to display considerable caution in the matter of extending commitments.

There were many conjectures being advanced as to what the President will say in his address to the country tomorrow evening. In most quarters it was believed he would deal particularly with legislation enacted by the last Congress and lay stress on the industrial recovery so far achieved.

Hopes were expressed that some insight would be given into the administration's plans for the future. It was taken for granted that the message will tend to allay business fears and inspire confidence.

RALLY CHECKS GRAIN DROP

CHICAGO, June 27.—Dominated by persistent pressure of newly harvested receipts Southwest, the wheat market late today fell materially below yesterday's finish, but recovered just at the last.

Contributing to wheat weakness were Canadian reports of improved crop conditions. As much as three inches of rain overnight were reported in parts of the Canadian pararie provinces.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ higher, September 90-¾, corn ½-⅞ advanced, oats ⅛ off to ¼ up, and provisions showing declines of 2 to 7 cents.

Market Listless Awaiting Control Board and President's Address Tomorrow Night.

The stock market tape, moving spasmodically in a listless atmosphere, furnished traders with no trustworthy clues today to the next important swing of the market. Chart-readers, however, were disposed to be bullish. They noted that the market since mid-day had been "working itself in a corner," that its support levels have been raised on intervening reactions. The Street's excuse for merely waiting was President Roosevelt's address to the country tomorrow night and the anticipated announcement of the new stock exchange commission. The stock market, though, seldom in the past has shown much animation at this time of the year.

Wall street operators, market letter writers and brokers, not to mention underwriters of security issues, continue to tread gingerly along the highways of finance for fear of running afoul new federal regulations. Accountants also have become highly sensitive to the possibilities of being tripped up by the new laws and thrown for a financial loss, judging by the prospectus sent out by a leading investment trust. The corporation, according to the prospect, entered into agreement with a firm of accountants to idemnify the firm in the event of any claims against the accounts arising under the securities act of 1933 in connection with registration of securities.

The price of silver abroad continued to creep upward today. London marked up the price of the metal another fraction. Activity and strength in the New York futures market also surprised those who had been predicting the silver purchase bill recently passed by Congress, with its 50 per cent tax on speculative profits, would virtually kill trading in the metal here. China and England were reported to be accumulating silver in anticipation of a further rise in price, activated chiefly by United States Treasury demand to carry out the provisions of the silver bill.

The average stock now is selling below quotations a year ago, when the 1933 speculative boom was still going strong but headed for the mid-July crack-up. In the interval, however, the bull market in metal shares and a few individual issues favored by steady improvement in earnings has carried on. The gold and silver motif has been woven prominently through market patterns of the last few months. Gold and silver profits reaped in recent months are beginning to pour into the laps of shareholders in form of increased dividends and extras.

The abrupt decline in steel operations will put a big dent in the average curve of business activity based upon leading lines of productivity. Because of the importance of steel as a component of business indices, the level of industrial activity through the greater part of June has been showing a contra-seasonal upward tendency. With the curtailment of steel operations to levels more in accordance with general business seasonal tendencies toward recession should become more noticeable.

Nevertheless, one of the most comprehensive reflectors of business activity, electric power consumption, shows striking stability for the past few weeks. A further modest gain in power output last week keeps the total around the top level of the year. Aside from New England, which was in the midst of an abnormal summer boom in textiles and consumers goods last year, the major geographical sections of the country are still using more power than they did a year ago.

Ickes to Enforce Code on Petroleum

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(INS.)—Although the administration oil bill allied of enactment in the last session of Congress the oil code will be enforced by every means available, administrator Ickes declared today.

He made the announcement as hearings opened on a proposed amendment to the code providing quotas on crude oil shipments as a check on supply and demand.

STEEL DECLINE NO SURPRISE

NEW YORK, June 27.—Iron Age says: "Sharp curtailment in steel production which had been widely predicted in the trade following general price advances in April and May has materialized according to expectations. While a 20 per cent decline in output, or from 60 to 48 per cent of capacity in a single week was rather drastic, it is explained by the fact that raw steel production has recently been maintained at an artificially high rate in order to supply the diversified needs of finishing mills which must complete shipments against second quarter contracts this week in order to comply with code regulations.

"Current ingot production is particularly hard to gauge as furnaces are being taken off daily and some companies began the week with a rate of output fully 20 per cent higher than that at which they will finish the period. Declines have been general throughout the country. The only exceptions being at Birmingham and Detroit, where production is unchanged."

GROUP STUDIES U. S. 'PLAN'

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Secretary Morgenthau hopes some "long term planning" will result from a broad survey of government finances which a group of economists will make this summer.

The Treasury chief announced yesterday that the group, under the leadership of Dr. Jacob Viner, special assistant, will study the nation's banking, currency and taxation systems. The inquiry will acquire information for next year's fiscal program.

One topic for study by economists looking into taxation and revenue will be "the possibility of making use of revenue provisions as a business stabilizing device." Financial policies such as the gold and silver programs will be examined. Morgenthau said:

"We will review our policies and satisfy ourselves that what we are doing is for the best interests of everybody. If it isn't, we'll say so."

VAUGHAN'S RISE AS STAR MAJOR LEAGUE FEATURE

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Deans May Win 45 Tilts. Beat Giants Five Times. Pilots Feature Big Game.

Sluggers at First Base. Headguards for Icers. Klick Seen as Victor.

When Dizzy Dean predicted last spring that he and his brother Paul would pitch a total of 45 victories for the Cardinals this year, many baseball followers set it down as just another idle boast by the talkative pitcher. But it begins to look as though Dizzy's prophecy may be fulfilled. Paul's victory over the Giants yesterday gave the brothers a total of 20 wins to date. The younger Dean has won 10 games against a single defeat. Dizzy has won 10 and lost three. Twenty games won out of the first 24 pitched by the pair, a family record never approached in the majors, would appear to indicate that 45 victories may not be too high for the Deans to reach, inasmuch as the Cards have 92 games more to play.

Dizzy Dean

If the Giants do not win the pennant they can attribute their failure largely to the operations of the Deans. The Terrymen have been the chief victims of the brothers' drive. St. Louis has won six games out of 10 from New York so far this season, and five of the six victories were pitched by the Dean boys. Paul has beaten the Giants three times and Dizzy toppled them twice, and the world champions have yet to win a game from either of them. Dizzy is scheduled to try to match Paul's three wins in the final game of the Giant series today.

FIVE MANAGERS IN ALL-STAR BALL GAME

If the presence of an unusual number of master minds in the lineups of the contesting teams may be accepted as a guarantee of sound playing doctrine, that all-star inter-league game in New York on July 10 surely ought to be free from tactical blunders. For while Bill Terry and Joe Cronin have been appointed officially as the managers of the National and American League casts, they will not be the only pilots to figure in the big tussle by any means.

The trend of the balloting up to date makes it practically certain that, even if Mickey Cochrane, the Tiger leader, fails to get a place among the catchers on the American League team, no fewer than five managers will take part in the game. In addition to Terry at first base for the all-Nationals, and Cronin at shortstop for the American Leaguers, Pie Traynor and Frankie Frisch are expected to be chosen for third and second bases on the Heydler team, while Jimmy Dykes probably will draw the third-base assignment in the Harridge lineup. The National League club will have almost an all-manager infield with Terry at first base, Frisch at second and Traynor at third.

GREAT ARRAY OF FIRST-BASE SLUGGERS

The major leagues this year present the strongest array of slugging first basemen the game ever has known. In no other season have the big loops boasted so many first sackers of exceptional clouting ability. This applies particularly to the American League, where every club has a home run specialist or at least an extra-base swatter guarding the gateway.

Jimmy Foxx

There are Jimmy Foxx, of the A's; Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees; Zeke Bonura, of the White Sox; Hal Trosky, of the Indians; Hank Greenberg, of the Tigers; Irving Burns, Browns; Joe Kuhel, Senators, now idle, and Eddie Morgan, of the Red Sox. Nearly all of the first basemen in the National League also are dangerous birds with the ash. There are lots of things the average pitcher would rather do than face in a pinch Bill Terry, of the Giants; Gus Suhr, of the Pirates; Jim Collins, of the Cardinals; Sam Leslie, of the Dodgers; Don Hurst, of the Cubs; Jim Bottomley, of the Reds, or Randy Moore, of the Braves. And even Dolph Camilli, of the Phils, has got to be respected. At the same time the fielding at first base in several American League spots is weaker than in many years, but in the National defensive standards in the main are consistently high.

DEATH OF ICER REVIVES HEADGUARD CRY

If you don't see every player wearing a headguard when major league hockey comes back to Pittsburgh, it won't be due to any inactivity in the meantime on the part of those favoring that measure of protection for the puckmen. Since the death of Chuck Gardiner, the game's greatest goalie, due to a brain tumor attributable to a head injury, there has been a revival of the demand for a National League ruling that will make the wearing of headguards by the icers compulsory.

Seme of the players consented to wear headguards after Ace Bailey had a close call from death last season, but the majority are reluctant to accept the headgear, fearing that they will be viewed as softening up by the fans. The crusaders hold that to be a ridiculous attitude, insisting that the game in its modern setting is rougher than it ever was in the old days. The players' argument that they got along without head protection in the past is not a sound one. Performers in other rough sports have protection now which they did not have at one time. Baseball catchers never wore shinguards until Roger Bresnahan introduced them in 1907. Many seasons passed before football players got the armor they wear today, and there was a time when jockeys did not dream of the fiber caps now is use.

CANZONERI MAY BE DEFEATED BY KLICK

A challenger for the world lightweight fistic crown now adorning the brow of Barney Ross is expected to come out of the bout between Tony Canzoneri and Frankie Klick at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn tonight, and there is a strong chance that it will not be Canzoneri. The former 135-pound champion has won seven fights since his second defeat at the hands of Ross, one of them over this same Klick by a disputed decision, but it is doubtful if he has enough of his old speed left to repeat at this time against the up and coming Californian.

Frankie Klick

Klick gave Canzoneri such a close battle last October that the decision in favor of Tony came in for a lot of adverse criticism. Frankie lost two more bouts soon afterward to Jimmy Leto and Eddie Coll, but since that time he has been marching along in impressive style, his most notable performance having been a knockout victory over Kid Chocolate and a draw with Champion Ross. Canzoneri is going and Klick is coming, and while Tony may surprise with one of his old spurts in a desperate effort to qualify for a third meeting with Ross, the chances appear to be that Klick will take the decision.

SCRIBES, FANS' IDEAS DIFFER

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Major league baseball writers, polled in connection with the balloting for the all-star teams scheduled to play July 10 at the Polo Grounds, differ somewhat sharply with the fans in several instances, it was disclosed today by the Baseball Writers' Association.

Lefty Grove, second in the popular balloting to Lefty Gomez among American pitchers, is not among the first five choices of the experts, who also show a preference for Frank Higgins, of the Athletics, over Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, at third base.

The writers' choices, including only the leaders, with votes cast:

LOOP TO PICK NEW MEMBER

Managers of the City Baseball League will congregate in the Hotel Henry tonight at 9:30 o'clock to decide which club shall take the place of Beltzhoover, which has tendered its resignation to President Everett Sweeny.

While the league prexy indicated that both the Immaculate Heart and the Scott Morgan nines want the berth, it is believed that a number of other managers will be on hand tonight.

Any chance that the Book nine had to win the championship of the first half race last evening passed when the storm broke around game time. Everything depends upon the outcome of the Homewood game with the Books at Olympia Park tomorrow evening.

Last evening's heavy rain completely washed out the local sandlot card, but the Pittsburgh Crawfords managed to get a game in at Asbury, N. J., defeating the Belmar Braves, 4 to 1. Paige hurled a three-hit masterpiece for the Crawfords.

F. C. WEISSELL JOINS PROS IN FIELD

Another entry from a distant point has come into the field for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph-Oakmont Boat Club's William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup outboard motorboat regatta to be held in the Allegheny River at Oakmont on Saturday and Sunday, July 14-15.

The latest addition is Fred C. Weissell, Jr., of North Arlington, N. J., who competed in the Around-Manhattan race in New York last Sunday. He is entered in the professional C and F classes.

The committee in charge of the regatta will hold one of its most important meetings at the Oakmont Boat Club tonight, when all members are urged to be present.

SUMMIT CLUB SETS NEW DATE

By TOM BIRKS

The Summit Golf Club, of Uniontown, will hold its first 36-hole medal play tourney over the mountain course, Monday, July 9, Vincent Eldred, chairman of the Tri-State professional golfers' tournament committee, announced today.

At a meeting between Leo Heyn, manager of the Summit club, and the executive body of the professionals' association, the new date was agreed upon when it was found that July 23, the original date selected, conflicted with the date for the playing of the National Professionals' tourney at Buffalo.

It was also decided to abandon the pro-amateur tourney, which usually is held on the preceding afternoon. The tournament will be an invitation affair. Bob Graham, professional at the club, is sending invitations to the leading professionals in the Tri-State, Cleveland, and West Virginia districts.

Results of the matches in Section I of the women's league yesterday indicates that a grand battle is going to develop Friday when the teams clash in the final match. By virtue of a 5-to-1 victory over Edgewood, Oakmont forced its way into the lead with 26 points with the Field Club second with 25. The Field Club had its hands full getting three points from Allegheny.

For the second year in succession, St. Clair proved to be the class of Section II, Mrs. L. W. Gillette's team capturing five points from the Country Club in Section I in the post-season playoffs. Yesterday's results:

VINCE DUNDEE DEFEATED

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—Middleweight Champion Vince Dundee had a piece of change, and a beating, to show today for an overweight bout with Haydon (Young) Stuhley, of Kewanee, Ill.

Dundee, who appeared in Chicago a day before the fight, instead of six days as usually required by the Illinois State Athletic Commission, failed to take the engagement very seriously last night at Mills Stadium, and Stuhley won a 10-round decision. Dundee was the aggressor most of the way, but a left hook to the chin bounced him through the ropes in the eighth round, and a right opened up a bad cut over his left eye in the third.

BUC SHORTSTOP SEEN AS BEST IN GAME

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The rise of Arky Vaughan Pirate shortstop, is one of the standout developments of the National League as the big baseball campaigns pound their way along toward the half-way post. The action of the major league writers in giving Arky preference over Travis Jackson, of the Giants, for the shortfield job in the big inter-league fight of July 10, shows the way the straws are blowing in connection with the youthful Pittsburgh star.

Paul Waner, speaking over the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph station, WCAE, said that Vaughan had an excellent chance to win the National League batting crown this year, yet there are other major leaguers who get as much thrill out of Arky's base running as they do when he socks the ball. Forbes Field patrons are always buzzing with admiration when the swift shortstop is on the sacks.

Jackson remains one o the great stars fo the shortfield but when all angles of the sport are considered it is doubtful whether Travis should be given the call over the Pittsburgh youngster in the championship scrap coming up next month.

OPEN TOMORROW

The Pirates will enjoy an open date tomorrow and will rest up for a tough series with the Cubs which gets under way Friday. On Saturday the Buccos and Bruins will stage the silver jubilee game at the Oakland orchard. The series will close with a contest Sunday.

The elements may have been kind to the Pirates yesterday in the 50-50 party with the Phillies. After they had defeated the home boys, 5 to 4, in the early game, the Quakers were crowding the Bucs in the sixth inning of the nightcap when the storm broke and stopped play. The contest reverted back to the fifth inning, the Bucs winning, 4 to 1.

When darkness and the umpires halted the contest the invaders had runners on third and first with two out, the man on first representing the tying marker. One run had been scored and Bud Clancy, batting for Pitcher Ed Holley, had one ball and no strikes.

The rain came down in sheets after the players left the field and at the end of a 30-minute period the contest was called officially.

Phil Collins triumphed over the Buccos in the opener. Ralph Birkofer was the victim of this defeat, although there was a pretty strong indication that Umpire Dolly Stark may have missed a called strike or two on Dolph Camilli to prolong the fourth inning and set the stage for Bucky Walters' three-run homer which swayed the contest to the Phils.

WALK IS COSTLY

Two were out when Camilli walked on disputed pitches. Todd followed with a single and Walters measured the left wall for his round-tripper. Jeffries' double and Collins' single added another tally in the round.

The Quakers scored the fifth and winning run off Leon Chagnon in the sixth. Two walks, a single and a long fly did the trick.

The Pirates nicked Collins for five hits and all four of their runs in the fifth and sixth innings. The veteran finished up in a smart manner.

Red Lucas won over Ed Holley in the curtailed second fight. Bartell's fumble with two out in the first gave Gus Suhr a chance to smack in two runs and he did it with a double.

LAYDEN GOES ON TOUR

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—(AP.)—Elmer Layden, new head football coach of Notre Dame is in town on a mission somewhat likened to that of a cowboy outrider on a ranch mending fences.

While no direct statements were made, it was learned that since Knute Rockne died the alumni have been gradually drifting away from the solid contact under "Rock's" regime. Layden's good will tour included meetings with the alumni in Salt Lake City, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The report Notre Dame and California might hook up in a future football game was dissipated by the statement of Graduate Manager W. W. Monahan that California is to schedule no more intersectional contests during the regular season and home and home post season affairs are not likely because of climatic conditions in the middle West.

U. S. GOLFERS TRAIL AS COTTON'S 67 LEADS BRITISH OPEN

SHUTE TALLIES 71, SARAZEN CARDS 75

SANDWICH, Eng., June 27.—(AP.)—Shattering all first round records in the history of the British Open golf championship, tall Henry Cotton, a native professional, today scored a sub-par 67 over the Royal St. Georges course to take a full three-shot lead in the first 18 holes of the 72-hole title grind.

Cotton "burned up" the first nine holes in 31 strokes—the same number that he required to reach the turn there Monday in the first 18-hole qualifying round when she shot a 66—and came home in even 4's for a 36 to better by one stroke the first round record of 68, held jointly by the redoubtable Bobby Jones and the swashbuckling Walter Hagen.

The Britton, whose best performamnce in the Open to date was last year when he finished seventh, finished the first round three strokes ahead of Fred Taggart, another British pro, who shot the course in 34-36 for a 70 and second place.

SHUTE CARDS 71

The pace-setter was four shots in front of a group of seven players, including Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, the defending champion, who had first round 71's.

The way Cotton was shooting today, the 27-year-old English-born Belgium star, left no further doubt that he's a real menace to the four American professional stars who are endeavoring to perpetuate America's 10-year strangle-hold on the championship.

In addition to having a four-stroke lead over Shute, Cotton was seven shots ahead of Joe Kirkwood, eight strokes in front of Gene Sarazen and 10 strokes beyond the veteran MacDonald Smith. Kirkwood had a first round 74, Sarazen 75 and Smith 77.

Cotton's par-shattering performance of today and Monday was no flash in the pan as he has been gathering in practically every professional tournament this year in England.

SEVEN IN DEADLOCK

Parcell Dallemange, of France, and Cecil Denny, of Great Britain, joined Shute in the deadlock for third place with 70s. The others in the septet were Bert Hodson, Bill Laidlaw, A. H. Padgham and Charles A. Whitcombe.

Bert Gadd, the British professional who won the qualifying medal with rounds of 71 and 69, was out in 35 and back in 41 for a 76.

Robert Sweeney, former New York amateur now at Oxford, who finished among the leaders in the qualifying test, wrecked his title chances by carding a first round 80.

Jimmy Foxx Tells Of Longest Homer

When Jimmy Foxx, of the Athletics, hit a home run into the center field bleacher at Chicago, the first time the trick had been turned, the ball traveling 455 feet before it landed, he remarked:

"I thought it was about time those fans in the bleachers were getting a break. Someone ought to hit a ball in there at least once a year."

Discussing the same sensational hit the following morning, Jimmy said:

"It's queer, but once or twice a year Ted Lyons tries to sneak a high, fast one by me with the result I generally hit it out of the lot. Having such a record, I imagine that Ted believes that I will think he will never try one again, but I am always on the watch for just such a ball when Ted is pitching, for I know he is a mighty crafty pitcher."

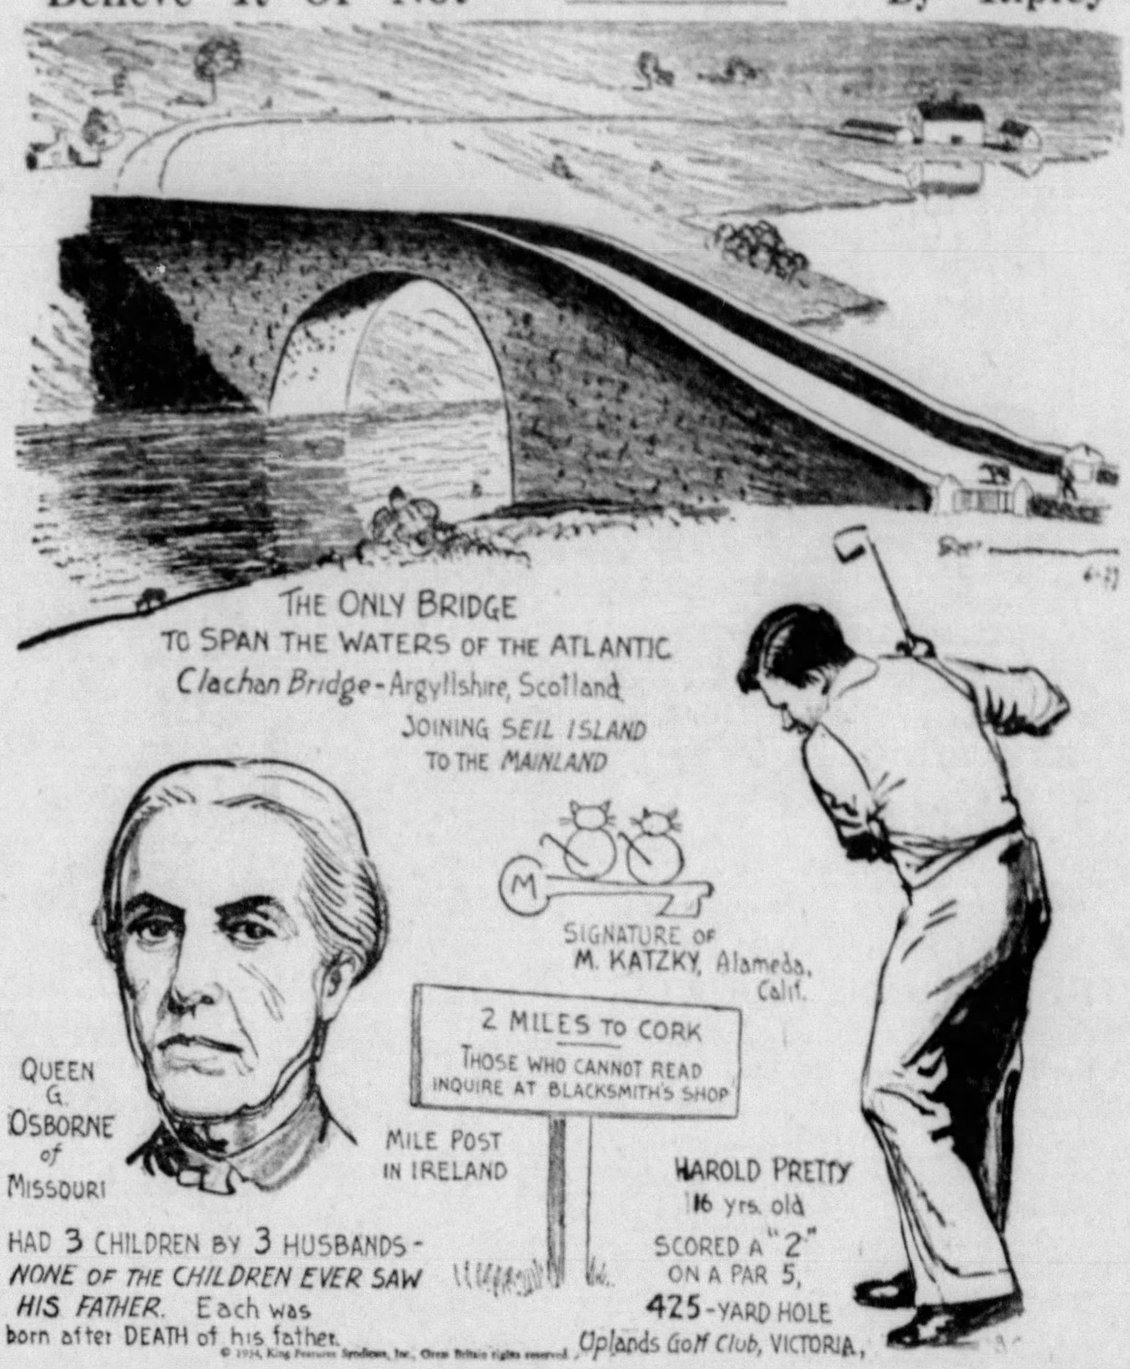
'Activities of Ohio Race Body Praised

Ohio racing under supervision of the State Racing Commission is proceeding on a very satisfactory basis reports received by George E. Blecker, Mansfield, chairman of the commission, show.

The public and persons interested professionally in racing alike have expressed their commendation of the business-like procedure with which the commission is exercising its jurisdiction over the operation of tracks with mutual betting.

The assurance of the commission that no tracks having mutuel betting would be permitted to operate unless ample warranty concerning financial responsibility was given in advance has had popular reception.

Believe It Or Not By Ripley



EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: INCREASING DEAD WEIGHT: A 200-pound man crouching on a scale will find that he can tip the scale at 320 pounds or more by suddenly rising to a standing position. Try it some time. The attendant push on the scale is the same effect as that produced by jumping on the scale from more than a foot or two in elevation. THE CONSTANT BREAKFAST—During the last 49 years John Reichardt, of Iowa City, Ia., has eaten no less than 215,000 pancakes and more than 100,000 eggs on his breakfast menus alone. Every morning without exception he eats a dozen cakes and a half dozen fried eggs, and ofttimes eats exactly the same dish for lunch and dinner. He just grew to like them when he was a boy and never changed.

WOLFF BEATEN IN GOLF PLAY

BULLETIN.

COUNTRY CLUB CLEVELAND, June 27.—Regis Wolff, of Pittsburgh, was defeated, five and three, by Berrien Moore, of Georgia Tech, in the first round of the National Intercollegiate golf championships here today.

COUNTRY CLUB, CLEVELAND, June 27.—(AP.)—Billy Ward, of Syracuse, a comparatively unknown in collegiate golf circles, defeated Pat Sawyer, of Minnesota, 5 and 4, in the first round of the annual intercollegiate golf championship here today.

Charley Koesis, of the University of Michigan, medalist of the tournament, won his opening match with Burt Resnick, of Yale, 3 and 2, and will meet Ward in the second round this afternoon.

Ward's defeat of Sawyer was a distinct surprise to tournament followers.

Berrien Moore, of Georgia Tech, was 1 up on Regis Wolff, of Pittsburgh, at the end of the first nine holes.

The two Michigan boys, Clarence Markham and Woodrow Malloy, who were pitted against each other in the first round, were all even at the turn.

Johnny Banks, of Notre Dame, and Arthur Wood, of Harvard, were waging a merry battle and made the turn all even. Fred Newton, of Rollins, was 3 up on Bill Zieske, of Minnesota, while A. F. Kammer was leading Joe Lynch, of Georgetown, 1 up, at the halfway mark.

Ed. White, of Texas, gained a three-hole advantage over Fred Towne, of Yale, on the outgoing nine, and Charley Yates, of Georgia, was 1 up on Winfield Day, of Notre Dame, while another South Bend player, John Montedonico, was 1 up on Law Weatherwax, of Yale, at the turn.

Joseph P. Lynch, of Georgetown, was elected president of the Intercollegiate Golf Association of America last night to succeed Arthur M. Wood, of Princeton.

Lynch won the annual driving contest with an average of 319 yards for three tries, his longest swat being 348.

Pink Elephants, Purple Eels, Etc., Flee From SODY

"Morning After" Loses Its Terrors To Users of New Drink

BRINGS BACK PEP

With the dawn of the convivial age comes the discovery of a new, enjoyable drink which routs the demons that plague participants on the morning after.

Believe it or not, as a famous cartoonist says, it is now possible to drink your share of whatever the bar keep sets up and still be on deck next morning fresh as a daisy, clear in the head and full of the old pep. The answer is that your last drink of the evening must be SODY.

SODY is a sparkling, champagne-like drink that slides down as smoothly and pleasantly as the first cocktail. In fact when you taste it, you'll say it's one of the best drinks of the evening. SODY is called "the laxative you can drink with a smile."

SODY exerts an alkaline influence on the stomach and intestines and thus chases "jumpy" nerves; and its beneficial fruit salts, aided by the sparkling, carbonated water gently wash and flush the entire system thoroughly. A small split of SODY does the work of twice the volume of evil tasting medicines. It relieves constipation, headache, indigestion, etc.

But you don't have to wait for a party to get acquainted with SODY. Get a bottle today and keep it on hand for use when needed by any member of the family. Sold by drug stores and soda fountains.

20¢ EACH 3 FOR 55¢ SODY The LAXATIVE you can drink with a SMILE

GANGER BOWS TO CANADIAN AT MERION

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—(AP.)—A pair of net huskies with a lot of what it takes in tennis, piled into the favored list in the national intercollegiate championships yesterday and spill seedings wide apart by registering startling upset victories.

Unsung in advance rankings and given but an outside chance to come through, these two—Kendall Cram, of Tulane, and Carl Holmes, of California's Berkeley branch—brushed aside two of the seeded list of eight as the field narrowed itself to 16 survivors and swept into the fourth round at the Merion Cricket Club.

Cram ran into fourth-seeded Ellsworth Davenport, of Harvard, passed him with a baffling mixture of drop shots and crashing forehand volleying, and ran out a 6-3, 6-4 triumph.

Holmes, rallying after a slow start, crushed Pennsylvania's national intercollegiate king, sixth-seeded Marco Hecht, 2-6, 6-1, 6-2.

The defending crownholder, Jack Tidball, of the University of California at Los Angeles, played a smooth game to down Hugh Lynch, Princeton captain, 6-4, 6-2.

Two ranking Canadians, both from McGill, also scored comparatively easy wins. Bob Murray, top seeded, handed Nathan Ganger, of Pitt, a 7-5, 6-2 beating, and the Canadian Davis Cup star, Laird Watt, stroked out a 6-4, 6-2 conquest over Temple's Ed Bordin.

BUSH FAVORS SLUGGERS

They may call home runs cheap and common and no longer magnets to draw fans through the gates but nevertheless they're being used quite frequently to insure progress in the pennant races and help out the weary pitchers.

The old-fashioned game of playing for one run sounds good on paper but when the team gets out on the field one run doesn't mean much.

They come in clusters nowaways. And the husky who can pick out a fast one and send it screaming over the fence is still a mighty valuable man to have around.

Donie Bush, manager of the Minneapolis club, doesn't go much on the one-run theory. He has Joe Hauser, the homer-a-day man, in his lineup, and he has Ab Wright, a coming Joe Hauser and a home run star in his own right, and now he trades two players to Birmingham for the great Buzz Arlett, Hauser's only real rival in the matter of season's totals.

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

Well, one week from today is the Fourth of July and a saying used to be that as the bars stand then so they will stand at the end of the season. But I doubt whether that is a safe prediction to make this year. There will be a lot of scrapping the rest of the year, maybe right down to the finish. Why, it is not even safe to predict that the Reds will not win the pennant. By the way, what has happened to all those home runs everybody thought would ruin the game? They have shriveled to singles.

TRANS-MISS. LEAD SHARED

DALLAS, Tex., June 27.—(AP.)—The baffling challenge of par 35-35—70 remained unconquered after a field of 186 players had barraged the first 18 of the 36-hole qualifying round in the trans-Mississippi championship at the Brook Hollow Golf Club here.

Two sharpshooters, David (Keg O' Nails) Goldman, local ironworker, and Zell Eaton, Oklahoma City's medal-play wizard, each carded a 71 to lead the first round yesterday.

Wilson Schoellkopf, Brook Hollow ace, and Chicago's redoubtable Johnny Dawson trailed the leaders with 72 each. Three strokes back of Goldman and Eaton was Johnny Goodman, Omaha, 1933 national open champion, who carded 36-38—74. Four strokes from the front-runners was Lawson Little, San Francisco, British amateur champion and Walker Cup star, who admitted he was satisfied with 38-37—75 after a bad round of putting.

Gus Moreland, Dallas, 1932-1933 trans-Mississippi champion and Walker Cup player, finished far down the list with 40-38—78 after a start that gave him putts for birdies on the first four holes. Edwin McClure, four times Louisiana champion, rallied after a miserable start to card 41-38—79, and Reynolds Smith, Texas amateur king, had to riddle the back nine with an assortment of marvelous shots to card 44-36—80.

Mayberry in Need Of Transfusion

CHARLEROI, Pa., June 27.—A second blood transfusion is being planned for Howard Mayberry, former ring star and at one time lightweight champion of Canada, who has been confined to the hospital here since last Armistice Day. Mayberry suffered injuries in an automobile accident which have failed to improve.

It is expected that he will undergo the amputation of a leg and that the blood transfusion may be necessary to save his life.

U. S. GIRL NET ACES WIN AT WIMBLEDON

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 27.—After frequent delays, all play in the Wimbledon tennis championship was halted today because of heavy rains.

Up to the time officials stopped play the American contingent fared well, losing only one match in which Virginia Rise, of Boston, was defeated by Mrs. H. C. Hopman, of Australia, 6-4, 10-8, in the second round of the women's singles.

The American colors were carried into the third round of the women's singles by Sarah Palfrey Brookline, Mass., star and Carolin Babcock, California youngster before play halted.

U. S. GIRLS ADVANCE

Miss Palfrey eliminated Evelyn Dearman, British star, 6-3, 6-2, and Miss Babcock defeated Colette Rosambert, of France, 7-5, 6-2.

The new Anglo-American doubles combination of Nigel Sharpe and Frank Shields, ranking United States player, worked effectively despite bad light, rain and slippery courts to defeat J. H. Knottenbelt and O. Leombruggen, Hungarian pair, 6-4, 6-0, 6-3, in the first round.

Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, British star, turned in a straight-set victory over D. P. Turnbull, of Australia, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3, in a third round match.

CRAWFORD TRAILS

Jack Crawford, of Australia, the defending champion in the men's singles, dropped the first set of his match with I. G. Collins, of Scotland, 6-4.

Rain halted play on the grandstand courts while Crawford was leading Collins, 3-0, in the second set.

It also interrupted the doubles match in which the American champions, George M. Lott, Jr., and Lester R. Stoefen, were leading Robert Tinkler and Charles Tuckey, British pair, 3-2, in the first set.

DEAN BROTHERS JINX TO GIANTS

YOUNGER STAR BEATS CHAMPS THIRD TIME

Associated Press.

The score of that famous National League series, the Brothers Dean vs. the world champion New York Giants, stood at 5-0 in favor of the eccentric pitching duo of the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Elder brother, Jerome H. (Dizzy) Dean, has beaten the champions twice in as many chances this season. Brother Paul, younger and not quite so noisy, outpointed them yesterday for the third successive time. Together they thus have accounted for five of the six victories the Cardinals have scored over the Giants in 10 games so far played.

WINS TENTH GAME

Young Paul, perhaps the league's outstanding freshman hurler, has pitched better ball games than he did yesterday, but he was adequate and earned his tenth victory against only one defeat. The Giants pounced on him for 15 hits, including Mel Ott's nineteenth home run and Travis Jackson's tenth, but the Cardinals presented him with a 13-2 lead as early as the fifth inning, and he staggered through to win, 13-7.

The Giants' defeat cut their league lead to two and one-half games over the Chicago Cubs, with the Cards another half game behind. The Cubs benefitted by Lon Warneke's steady pitching and won from Brooklyn, 5-2.

Pittsburgh, in the fourth place, split two games with the Phillies, dropping the first, 5-4, and winning the second, 4-1. The fifth place Boston Braves downed Cincinnati, 5-1.

YANKS, TIGERS WIN

In the American League, Danny MacFayden's fine pitching and Lou Gehrig's double and twentieth home run were the high spots in the New York Yankees' 6-2 conquest of the Chicago White Sox. Trailing the pace-setting New Yorkers by a few percentage points, although in a virtual tie with them, the Detroit Tigers stopped the Philadelphia Athletics, 4-1, behind Eldon Auker's seven-hit pitching.

Washington went into third place, Cleveland into fourth and the Boston Red Sox dropped to fifth as the result of the other two games. The Senators nosed out the St. Louis Browns, 10-9, but suffered a severe blow when Catcher Luke Sewell was hit on the head by a pitched ball and taken to a hospital for treatment of so-far undiagnosed injuries. Cleveland trounced the Red Sox, 10-2, as Willis Hudlin allowed only six hits.

Between Rounds

Eddie Ran, who meets Fritzie Zivic in the main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night, ran out on a match with Fritzie in California about a month ago and headed East. That's why Fritzie was most anxious to battle him at the first opportunity.

Fritzie wants to better the showing of Brother Eddie, who technically knocked out Joey Costa in the tenth round at Hickey Park last Monday night. He says he will try for a knockout in the first few rounds.

Dominic Mancini wants to fight Eddie Zivic. He saw Eddie in his bout with Costa and believes he can "take" the winner of that engagement. He will make 124 pounds to get the match.

MAXIE, RAMAGE DRAW

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—(AP.)—Maxie Rosenbloom, the world light-heavyweight champion, and Lee Ramage, young San Diego stylist, fought to a fast draw here last night in 10 rounds before 4,300 persons. The title was not at stake, as Ramage came in at 190 pounds and the New Yorker at 184.

Girl in the Family

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXI

Early in the afternoon Susan saw him pounding a small wooden sign on to a post at the end of the driveway. As soon as he came in she slipped out at the side door and ran across the dead wet grass of the front lawn to look at it. Painted in black letters on a white ground were the words, "Garage For Rent." Under them he had written in pencil, "Enquire Within."

The door of the old carriage house in the backyard stood open and within it, just visible from the street, were Grandfather Broderick's dog cart, high on its two wheels, and the victoria in which Susan's grandmother had done her visiting and shopping in the leisurely days of 30 years before. In the shadows behind them were things that the family had discarded from time to time. A cottage organ with pleated crimson silk behind the wooden fretwork of its front. A roll of cracked linoleum. Two brass bedsteads. A three-cornered couch that had been part of Lutie's "cozy corner" back in the days when she was young and every fashionable maiden in the United States had a "cozy corner" in the parlor.

There was enough room in the carriage house for one automobile, but there was no way of heating it. The doors hung loose on their rusty hinges and there was no lock on them. "Some garage!" thought Susan on her way back to the house.

Lutie was waiting for her in the dimness of the rear hall. "Isn't that the silliest thing? Trying to rent that old rookery as a garage?" she asked in a whisper. "I've told him that sign will have to come down before Wallace gets back to town. His mother will be coming to call, I suppose, too, and we certainly don't want a thing like that out in front."

Must Tell Wallace First

For a second Susan was tempted to tell her that it did not make any difference how brave or dismal a front they put up now for either Wallace or his mother—that she had made up her mind to break her engagement, and so they might just as well rent the carriage house and let it earn for them a little of the money they needed so badly.

But this wasn't the time to break the news. Wallace would have to be told about it first, and his ring and watch be returned to him.

Then, when it was too late for the family to argue with her about her decision, she would tell them about it. Then, and only then, it wouldn't be safe to tell them until she had completely freed herself from Wallace. They had talked her out of going to college. They had talked her out of business school and the security of a job. They might be able to talk her out of breaking her engagement if they knew she was planning to do it. They couldn't really, of course, and yet—

That afternoon at 4 oclock Susan, walking down South Main street toward the public library, felt herself a part of the bustling life of the wide gay thoroughfare with its crowded sidewalks, its honking automobiles and clanging street cars.

Always before now it had seemed to her that she was only an onlooker, watching other people as they went about the fascinating business of their lives—mothers and daughters hurrying along with the rapt intent look that women wear when they go shopping, girls meeting their sweethearts on street corners, blind to everyone around them.

Today she was one of them—on her way to meet Allen. She smiled at her reflection in shop windows as she went along, thankful for her tall slenderness and her color and the soft regularity of her features.

If there is ever a time that a woman knows just how good to look at she is, it is when she is in love, for she sees herself with her lover's eyes at that time; and today Susan saw with pleasure that the black caracul coat, rusty as it was, was becoming to the fairness of her skin, and that her little old black hat was turned up at just the right angle above the clear gray of her eyes and the shining sweep of her hair . . . Clothes don't matter so much after all, she decided.

Allen saw her when she was half a block away from the library and came toward her. But she waved him back and held up the four library books that she was carrying for him to see.

"I have to return these and pick out four new ones," she explained as they met, "before I do anything else." Arm in arm they went up the steps into the big quiet building where Susan had spent so many hours picking out detective stories for Aunt Edna and love stories for Lutie—the kind of books that supplied what each of them had missed. For Aunt Edna, the excitement; to Lutie, the romance and the passion of life.

It was almost dark when they left the library at half past four. In the next block two motion-picture theatres sparkled with red and white lights. The street lamps were shining out above the heads of the crowds, and a man with a wooden tray of violets hanging by straps from his shoulders stood at the bottom of the library steps.

"Only feefty cents a bunch, lady." He held out a bunch of them as Susan and Allen passed him.

"Let's buy a bunch for your coat, and then we'll find a place where we can talk," declared Allen, and, before Susan could stop him, he had dropped a silver coin into the tray and was lifting out a little round bunch of the wet dark flowers.

Stop in for Tea

Susan fastened them into the front of her coat and they went on down the street. "Let's go in here and have some tea or coffee—or whatever girls like to drink at this time of day," Allen said suddenly as they reached the corner where the St. Vincent hotel lifted its ornate gray stone bulk above the street. The lobby was large and bright and full of noise and movement. A page went through it calling, "Mr. Aylesworth — Mr. Carpenter — Mr. Aylesworth—Mr. Carpenter—" A stout blond woman in a mink coat, that was exactly the color of the toy dog she carried under one arm, swept in through the revolving doors followed by a boy who fairly staggered under her bags and hat boxes.

In the dining room just off the lobby an orchestra was playing "It Must Be True," and the lingering twilight was blue in the high windows with their heavy silk draperies. Only three or four tables were filled, and Susan felt as if she and Alein were alone in the great softly-carpeted room when the waiter had taken their order for coffee and cinnamon toast and left them at a table in the corner farthest from the door.

"It's quiet here, isn't it?" Allen asked, helping Susan out of her coat. "A very good place for us to get on with all the unfinished business of last night."

"It's terribly expensive, isn't it?" Susan said. The familiar little pang of pity that she always had for him shot through her again as she saw the shine on his blue serge coat and took in the cheapness of the silk in his dark blue necktie.

Then was she instantly sorry that she had spoken. He had wanted this afternoon to be perfect, no doubt, as any man would want his first gesture of hospitality toward his girl to be.

"But it's lovely just because it is expensive," she hurried to say. "My aunts used to bring me here to lunch sometimes a long time ago when we had more money than we have now. we used to spend whole days downtown shopping then. I always adored coming here."

She took her vanity box from a pocket of her coat and began to powder her nose with the aid of the vast looking glass that covered the wall beside their table. It was like a pool of still transparent water where the palms and the snowy tables of the room were reflected, and at the very bottom of it were Allen and herself close together. In the mirror she could see him watching her from his side of the table, the lines in his cheeks deep as he smiled.

"'Cute," he said.

"What?"

"Your nose and your eyelashes and your mouth. You!"

"Thanks."

They looked at each other and laughed, as if each of them had said something extraordinarily brilliant and witty.

"What a lovely, lovely time I'm having." Susan's face was flushed with happiness of the moment. "If you just knew how I've longed for something like this to happen ever since I've known you—and how jealous I've been of Mary Cullen!"

"Mary Cullen?" He shook his head. "Impossible!"

The waiter came back with coffee and toast and cream. Hidden behind a hedge of potted palms and oleanders, the orchestra began to play the newest song hit and the leader crooned the words in the wistful manner made popular by radio tenors.

"I'm confessing that I love you,
Tell me that you love me too.
I'm confessing that I need you.
Honest I do—"

"You hear songs like that all your life and they never mean a thing to you." Susan said, her eyes on the coffee as she poured it, "until you fall in love yourself, and find out what it's all about."

"I know that's true." One of Allen's hands reached out across the table and covered hers and the coffee was forgotten for a full moment. "I know because on the night of December nineteenth I saw a girl named Susan Broderick for the first time."

"Susan Broderick! What a prim and proper name. She must be an old maid," laughed Susan.

"I'll like her name a lot better myself when it's Susan Sholes." Allen said, taking his cup from her. His eyes darkened as they fell on the hand that held it out to him. "How long are you going to wear that fellow's ring, Susan?"

"I'm going to take it off this minute. I forgot that I had it on. Susan slipped Wallace's ring from her finger and tied it in a corner of her handkerchief.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

We watched two boys play tennis the other day, fellows! Each could play about as well as the other. They hit the ball with about equal force. Their serves were about on a par.

The first boy won the first set, then the second boy won the second and third set, and they were having a hard struggle in the fourth set. you could see that it was a very even game. But gradually, the second boy became tired. He only needed a few games to win but he didn't have quite enough endurance. The first boy won that set. Then won the fifth and match.

We thought it was a good example of how important strength and health are. You must have plenty of stamina and endurance to play violent games, take long hikes, or to do much hard work.

We are hoping every Junior Patrol member will try his best to be as strong and healthy as possible.

Eat plenty of fruit and vegetables. Drink plenty of pure water. Drink milk—at least a quart a day. And get plenty of sleep at night. These are simple health rules. If you add to them plenty of exercise—starting slowly at first—you should stay strong and healthy right along.

And don't forget that it's a good idea to be examined by a doctor at regular intervals. That's called a "periodic health examination." You really shouldn't wait until you get something the matter with you before you see the doctor. It's often much more difficult to cure a sickness than it is to prevent it.

We expect every captain to tell all its members about these things because it is a captain's duty to help his members as much as he can.

Please write to headquarters this week and let us know what you are doing in your meetings. And where you are holding them. Many patrols are meeting out of doors. If you don't have a nice place to meet out of doors near your home, maybe you could go to one of the parks.

ODD FACTS

The guinea, the gold coin which is no longer used in England, received its name from the fact that most of the gold used for making money in those days came from the Guinea coast.

One herring a day is said to be sufficient to supply all the protein a man needs.

Daily Short Short-Story

By FORREST LE ROY CASTLE

At 10 p. m. the big, twin-motored plane slit the dark fog at 10,000 feet, six hours out of Omaha, bound for Chicago.

The pilot looked back at his two passengers on the specially chartered flight, Bill Baily, Sheriff, and Joe Cheka. Cheka was wanted in Chicago for murder.

The pilot's eyes were cold and hard as they went back to the instrument board in front of him. He was remembering the words of Harry Harms, Associated Air Lines field manager, just before the takeoff. "I hate to send you on this flight, kid. I know how you feel about this guy. But you're the only good man I've got free. Take him through, will you? Forget how you hate him. Besides, Cheka doesn't know who you are. He needn't know. I haven't told the Sheriff anything."

And now he was "taking him through." Taking Joe Cheka to a trial in Chicago that he might beat.

The boy in the pilot's seat shook his head to clear it of the thought and began checking his instruments.

Joe Cheka called out disgustedly: "Aw, Bailey, be reasonable and take some of this hardware off me. I've got to stretch out or go crazy."

* * *

And when the sheriff didn't answer, "What're you afraid of? I can't go far in this chicken coop."

Baily answered that one. "Seems like I remember another officer doing something like that, Cheka. Jim Harding trusted you once. And now he's dead."

"Well, they haven't proved that I killed him. And, anyway, what'd I gain by rubbing you out? According to your own story, I haven't any wings to fly with. Come on. Give me a chance to stretch and smoke a cigaret."

"You can't smoke in a plane," the sheriff reminded him.

"Sure I can. Ask Birdsie up there."

The pilot nodded. "He can smoke," and then, "Why don't you be regular, sheriff, and take off the irons? All we're supposed to do is take him through."

"Well," the sheriff pulled his keys out slowly. "I'm going to give you a break, Cheka, but remember, try anything and I'll shoot until you quit kicking."

"Okay, sheriff. I'll remember."

After being released, Cheka lounged back in his seat and seemed to enjoy the cigaret Baily had given him.

The pilot turned and called back, "Ever see so many instruments in one spot before, Cheka?"

"Naw," Cheka answered, and would have continued to slouch and enjoy his cigaret but for the look in the pilot's eye.

Instead, he came forward. "What are some of them things?"

"Oh, this is the tachometer. Shows how fast the engine is turning over. Here's the gasoline gauge. That thing you got your finger on is the compass."

Cheka had bent down until his ear was close to the pilot's lips.

"Listen, Cheka, got the nerve to bail out?"

"What could I lose?" Cheka answered softly.

* * *

"Okay, parachute's in the washroom back in the tail of the plane. When we get over Chicago I'll let you know. If you hit the door on the port side of the plane north the way we're flying—it'll open."

After a half-hour of silence the pilot called out, "Over Chicago, the Windy City. It won't be long now."

Cheka got up casually and started toward the tail of the ship.

"Where're you going?" the sheriff barked.

"Drink of water."

"I'll get it."

"Okay," Cheka laughed, "I like service."

"Get your own water."

Cheka, his strategy successful, laughed softly.

Cheka was fast on his feet and was through the side door of the plane before the sheriff could get his gun clear of its holster.

In two jumps the officer was up to the pilot.

"Say, you double-crossing punk! There wasn't any parachute in this plane when we started. You sold out to Cheka. A fine pilot you are. And you said you'd take him through."

The pilot's voice was smooth and cold.

"Sure I took him through. We're over the Chicago airport. Cheka ought to be landing just about now."

"And he'll get away. That slippery beast."

The pilot shook his head. "Nope. I don't think so. That 'chute Cheka was using was being turned in for a new one, sheriff. I bet the slit in the silk was 10 feet long."

"Why—why you killed him!"

The boy laughed. "That's what you think, sheriff. Just as I think Cheka killed my dad, Jim Harding. It might be hard to get 12 men to think the same, sheriff. So," his voice hardened, "Cheka's now on his way for trial in a court that's hard to beat."

DON'T SAY 'BOO' TO THE ANIMALS IN THE ZOO

A recent news item quoted the Park Commissioner of New York City as saying that wild animals in the parks and zoos were injuriously affected by people shouting "Boo" at them. He was upheld in his pleas for less booing at animals by students of wild life, who have discovered that these animals have very delicate nervous systems and, when booed, are so affected as to be unable to eat.

To the long list of "Don'ts" they're added another
Not quite as important as "Don't swat your mother,"
But nevertheless, a pip of a taboo,
And one that I think is really brand new.
The civilized man is the animals' curse.
He'll capture a zebra, a python, or worse,
Deprive him of kith, of kin and of haunt.
Then blame it on nerves when it gets a bit gaunt.
Wild tho' they are, the lion and tiger,
The hartbeestes and such from the banks of the Niger
Have a system of nerves that quivers and tingles.
And if you shout "Boo" tehy'll break out in shingles.
The bigger the beast, the frailer his reflex;
So the hippo or rhino will very soon be wrecks
If people persist in that nerve-wracking habit
Of booing a beast as tho' he were a rabbit.
So we're living and learning and finding out things
That keep us from being as happy as kings.
Not even in fun can we call on a gnu
And right in his teeth shriek the nerve-tearing "Boo."
Or don't bring a radio into the zoo,
'Cause crooners like Crosby, with his boo-ba-ba-boo,
Would soon have the beasties running in curves
And yelling, "Come, come, sir, think of our nerves!"
You can shout, you can gesture or give the Bronx cheers;
Nay, even put straws in the elephants' ears;
But unless you like being the scouge of the zoo,
For the S. P. C. A.'s sake don't think the word "Boo."

Yanie.

They Refuel in Mid Air

The only way to eradicate the elastic muskeeter is to bring him up on a kerosene diet.

That means you must pour oil on him when he is an egg. That will ruin any omelet.

If you fail in that, you must meet him in later years when you are aging and he is in the prime of his sexadrills. Those stabbing beetles are now flying in echelon formation.

They have pursuit planes, scouts and bombers.

Now, if you want to eliminate future flight combats with the agile dooseldrops snapping, get yourself a can of coal oil and garnish the adjacent ponds. We were doing a neat shellacking job on a little lake yesterday when a farmer grabbed us and inquired wherefore, what and why?

"Pouring coal oil on the skeeters," we told him.

"My cows drink out of that pond," he said. "And I sell 'em in Chicago. There's been enough fires out there now. What will they think of, I send them cattle full of kerosene? A fire in the stockyards is the world's most expensive way of cooking steaks.

They got a big fair out there this year. If a cow steps on a nail, she will explode. You pour that kerosene in the parlor lamp and fan it with your hat.

Well, the result is that the skeeters from that pond are now big, healthy and vivacious. They average 24,000 R. P. M. and specialize in ground loops. They land. But not for repairs.

We have tried to eliminate them by smacking them down between our hands. The only thing that happens is the sudden clap makes us think we are applauding them. Then they start stunting.

We bang our mitts together all night. They put on a grand performance. Why, they are as vain as acrobats.

Whacking them with rolled-up newspapers is good exercise. But you might as well send them telegrams. Nobody ever cracked a skeeter with a newspaper. The way a skeeter flies shows he knows you can't hit a curve.

If you didn't get them while they were larvae, then you are in for a lumpy summer. We didn't. To make it worse we have some girls' names tattooed on our chest and the skeeters think we are a punch board.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

A woman gossip is bad enough, but a male scandalmonger is worse.

The gossipy man has more opportunities to learn scandalous or unfavorable facts about people.

Therefore he has more to talk about.

Relating facts that are detrimental to the reputation and standing of people is a despicable sort of amusement.

Often something, not a serious offense in its original state, attains surprising proportions when passed from one person to another.

There are comparatively few persons against whom evil reports might not be made.

It doesn't require much foundation to start a story and keep it circulating.

All that is needed is the tongue of a gossip.

Your life may present a fair degree of right living.

But haven't you made some little slips that might be construed as something indiscreet and surprisingly shocking by your friends?

If your reputation has escaped the attacks of a gossiper, you have been fortunate.

Drink American

President Should Raise Duty on Foreign Wines

Repeal constituted a significant step in the many-sided structure of economic recovery designed by the Roosevelt administration.

It became widely recognized that the re-creation of the defunct liquor industry would have the equivalent beneficial effect on employment and general business of the launching of a totally new trade.

Already the economic benefits, in addition to the value of the new sources of taxation, have been far-reaching.

But the full possibilities have not yet been realized.

REPEAL HAS BROUGHT ECONOMIC RECOVERY TO THE VINEYARDS OF DEFAULTING FRANCE AND ITALY AS WELL AS TO THE VINEYARDS OF CALIFORNIA.

If the infant American wine industry is to be adequately protected, the situation calls for the imposition of prohibitive duties on foreign wines.

Then a native industry, with widespread employment ramifications, can genuinely flourish.

It will include sound relief for farmers also.

If intelligent planning calls for reduced production of wheat, for example, the new demand for made-in-America wines will create wider opportunities for grape growers and there can be a shifting of manpower from the wheat fields to the vineyards.

With the trend toward national self-containment, it would be desirable to adopt a tariff policy which would be helpful to the American wine industry.

Then the full stimulus of repeal on American trade and employment would be realized.

By an educational process, consumers could be taught that the American wines are vastly superior in quality to the vin ordinaire which tourists buy overseas.

A sensible foreign trade policy would help to end the American sense of inferiority in certain directions.

There is no reason why Americans cannot develop unparallelled skill in the production of fine wines.

Before the war, it will be recalled, the myth prevailed that Americans lacked talent in the manufacture of chemicals and that they were hence necessarily dependent on foreign sources.

However, during and since the war, Americans applied their industrial genius to the field of chemistry, and our great chemical enterprises have become pace setters for the entire world.

This same experience can be repeated by the domestic wine industry.

The President should act under his new broad discretionary tariff policies to raise the duty on foreign wines to the maximum permitted.

A Sensible Step

Action of General Health Council in Its Fight on Social Diseases Deserves Support

A committee of prominent physicians and civic leaders has been formed to work with the General Health Council in its fight against "social diseases. Dr. W. W. McFarland, former public health director, heads the committee.

This work is deserving of full support from every individual as well as every organization in the city. It has been disclosed that scores of infected persons are not receiving treatment because of lack of facilities.

Another reason that "social" diseases represent the great national problem that they do today has been the unwillingness of the public in general to discuss solutions and to think sanely about this vital question.

A fortunate aspect of the present day is that most of us are willing to take public action on problems which were neglected by previous generations merely because nice people could not talk about such things.

There is said to be nothing particularly difficult about bringing "social" diseases under control. Public education and the supplying of competent treatment will reduce the menace.

Council Overrides Veto

Action on New Plumbing Law Fully Justified By Conditions in City

Council's action in overriding the Mayor's veto of the new plumbing regulation ordinance, applying to buildings of public assemblage and those where food or beverages may be sold, was fully justified.

The Mayor based his objections to the proposed regulations on the ground that there already are too many requirements to be met. He said that the regulations discourage the making of alterations and the erection of new buildings.

No searching investigation is needed to disclose entirely inadequate sanitary and poorly maintained facilities in many public places. This is especially true of a large number of small restaurants opened since the return of beer and liquor.

Much as this city wants new building and the improvement of old buildings, it certainly does not want any building which does not measure up to reasonable sanitary regulations.

The Glorious Fourth

Fire Crackers Go On Sale and Accidents to Children Invariably Increase

Talk about a "Safe and Sane Fourth" may become wearisome, but there are some facts about accidents to children which should draw the attention of everyone.

At least 1,000 children suffer eccidental eye injuries in the United States each year. About 75 per cent of these cases result in total blindness, Lewis H. Carris, managing director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, has made a plea for a "Safe and Sane Fourth."

Fireworks cause 23 per cent of all eye accidents to children, according to Miss Edith C. Kerby, statistician for the society. She has declared:

"It is extremely fortunate for the children that this type of plaything is not available for the celebration of all holidays."

Medals for Congressmen

For Services Rendered

A Parisian sculptor has written to President Roosevelt proposing to make a medal for the Seventy-third Congress, replicas of which are to be awarded to all members in recognition of their great services to the country and also "for identification purposes and as an heirloom for their families."

It seems a brilliant idea, but wouldn't a rubber stamp do as well?

The Quota System

(Copyright, 1934.)

In order to obtain a larger quota of the American wine market, it will be remembered, France agreed to buy a larger quota of American apples and pears.

Representative Britten remarked in Congress that France would probably find a "way out."

Now we know how. As soon as the new quota was fixed France imposed new high duties on American apples and pears—duties which the French importers called "prohibitive."

And immediately there was a "buyers' strike," as a result of which not a single order was placed for American pears and apples after the new taxes became effective.

Recently it was announced in Paris that the taxes would be reduced "soon."

And meanwhile, of course, we may go on buying French wines—and not selling any apples!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 27.—One of the newer restaurants to catch the fleeting fancy of the Broadway dinner and luncheon crowds is Gallagher's, with a thin carpeting of sawdust, plushed-up pine panelings and genial clatter. It is roomy, echoey and walls are lined with autographed photos of front-line warriors.

The jocular and terrific energy of eaters of he-food is apparent. Steaks are broiled over hickory logs in open ovens. And desserts are restricted to pies, hearty cheese and, of course, rice pudding. Sweets are taboo. The largest glass meat box in the world racks its dazzle of sirloin red and tallow yellow.

It's the only restaurant in town expressing bluff and ribald heartiness presided over by a woman. She is Helen Gallagher, who styles herself directress, and carries on the business started by her late father, moving genially among diners, speeding up service and exuding a domestic warmth.

A suspiciously bright blonde hat checker chaffs with customers. Over against a wall sat Jack Dempsey. Nearby Rudy Vallee, Gene Buck, Peggy Joyce, Leo Newman along with a scatter of those faintly saddened hangers-on trying to find the vulnerable heel—or is it heels?—of the Broadway parade. Gallagher's has a pronounced let-'er-go!

* * *

Such roast beef and tankard restaurants as Gallagher's, Dinty Moore's, Lindy's and Billy the Osterman, with interludes of bicker and jousting palaver, purge eating of usual stilted decorum. Pipe smoking is permitted and somehow I have noticed where pipes are lit after dining talk is likely to turn richly jocose. These are the places, too, that do not bar dogs or golf togs. More sedate cafes run to types, while the beefy spots, suggesting joints hanging in the yard and cheese stacked in the larder, fill with diverse personalities. And invariably a sprinkle of gamblers. Where gamblers eat, it's a 100 to 1 shot the food has robust venison and bitter ale tang. Also Elizabethan spirit.

* * *

New York cartoonists have a struggling sort of club, headed by F. G. Cooper and Tony Sarg, that meets now and then at a venerable family hotel called the Collingwood. They recently spurted into activity to give a dinner to Jay N. Darling (Ding), who as a governmental appointee has control of $50,000,000 for conservation work. A cartoonist in charge of fifty millions deserves not only a dinner but fireworks and a band. But wasn't it Ding who portrayed F. D. R. in a Fauntleroy suit?

* * *

The Lambs theatrical club is, after many vicissitudes, said to be out of the deep red and will not, like The Friars, have to abandon their clubhouse. Taxes have been reduced and a two-year plan of economy has resulted in balancing the budget. Many things contributed to the tough going, but chiefly it was neglect of members who left the legitimate for Hollywood, forgetting in instances overdue restaurant tabs and dues. In the Lambs grill every great star sometime laughed himself out of the last train to Great Neck. It has been the germinating ground for best stories of the day and clashing of wits. Wilton Lackey's fine mots, also William Collier's, started on their way around the world there.

* * *

I ran into a jay-bird crowd last night that spoke my language. One commenting on a comedian's joke said: "I nearly went up."

* * *

And a poet some day will discover deserted Times Square as dawn sifts over the rim of night. It is like standing in the middle ring after the circus crowds have gone—a furious boil of life of a sudden inert. The only other place touching it for fascination is a railroad terminal the same hour. Theodore Dreiser on his days in town is an early morning wanderer around Times Square and the depots. They were haunts, too, of David Graham Phillips and Harris Merton Lyon.

I launched an after dinner dissertation on the emotional reactions of color; the somber moeurs inspired by deep browns, exotic ecstasies of pinks and imperial urge of purple. "He's getting ready," said a familiar feminine voice from the other room, "to red necktie himself."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

How Honest Are You?

One of the hardest things in life is to be honest about your own feelings. Even to yourself.

Queer how people who pride themselves on being "perfectly honest"—who couldn't be bribed to tell a deliberate lie—will nevertheless pretend to feel the most outrageous whoppers. And not even realize that they're pretending.

It all begins with the absurd idea that we should all have certain feelings for certain occasions . . . certain reactions to certain experiences. This motion is hammered into our heads when we're still too young to question it.

Along about the time we're told that C-A-T spells cat, we are also informed that we should get mad if Someone Slaps Sister. Or shocked if Someone Says A Naughty Word.

If left to our own devices, we wouldn't mind a bit if Someone Slapped Sister. Sister, on occasions, being a complete nuisance, we'd like to slap her ourselves. Nor are we horrified by naughty words. To the contrary we dote on 'em.

But Mama, Teacher and Aunt Maggie assure us that we should feel otherwise. "Nice little girls and boys ALWAYS feel that way." If we don't, there's something funny about us.

So, not wishing to have Something Funny about us, we decide immediately to feel as Mamma, Teacher and Aunt Maggie have told us we should feel. And the next time Someone Slaps Sister we register the proper emotion. Presently, we don't know whether we "feel like that or not." But we act as if we did, anyway.

Then out we go into life—with new experiences and impressions crashing on us like a tidal wave. And we try our best to meet each new situation with the proper reaction. Sometimes, it's easy enough. Once, perhaps, out of every fifty times, we actually do feel the thing we're supposed to feel. But on the other forty-nine occasions there's something wrong with the picture.

Here, for instance, is something over which we should become Tremendously Excited. But we're not excited at all. We're emotionally a blank!

But surely this isn't right? We look at other people. They seem excited. Their eyes sparkle, their cheeks are flushed, they speak with great animation. Undoubtedly we should feel like that, too. "Nice People—Regular People—always feel like that!"

Then—horrid thought—maybe we're not regular? Maybe there's something lacking in us?

That's it! There must be something lacking in us. Some dreadful deficiency. But we'll never, NEVER let anyone guess it. We'll never let 'em know we're cold as clams inside. If we can't really feel excited, we can at least pretend to. We can laugh and shout and scream and cry and wring our hands, too. We'll fool 'em!

Nor do we only fool the bystanders. We fool ourselves. We put on such an elaborate act—we assure ourselves so often that we really are "all worked up"—that presently we actually believe it, and would be righteously indignant if anyone told us that we were fakirs.

Which is all, of course, completely cockeyed. To begin with, there AREN'T any "proper feelings" for given occasions. It's as unreasonable to expect everyone to have the same feelings as it is to expect them to like the same foods, the same jobs, the same interests and amusements.

Some people are quick on the trigger, emotionally. Some aren't. Yet the Solid Citizens' contribution to society may be infinitely more valuable than that of the Chronic Squawkers.

People aren't all alike. Nor are occasions. As mentioned before, maybe it's sad to see sister slapped. Maybe it isn't. There are two sides at least to every catastrophe, and usually a dozen. And perhaps when you're sobbing you ought to be cussing. Or cheering! But our cockeyed social conventions insist we must sob, regardless. And heaven help you if you don't!

However, if you have the courage to Be Yourself and to take the beating that implies, life can be an amazing adventure. You'll be lonely. You'll be unpopular. But you'll also be surprised.

For you'll meet a Self and a World you never knew before—and they'll both be worth the admission price.

Merchant Marine Needs President's Leadership

By James T. Williams, Jr.

WITH one hand the federal government, after a decade of neglect, has begun the building up of the Navy to "equality with the strongest" in every class of combatant ship.

With the other hand the federal government is permitting the American merchant marine to deteriorate on the seven seas.

Sea power, as all history teaches, requires both a strong navy and a strong merchant marine for its effectiveness.

The War of 1812 was won by sea power, of which an essential unit was American merchant ships. Five hundred and seventeen privateers sailing from American ports captured in that conflict thirteen hundred prizes, totaling in value $39,000,000.

Then came American clipper ships which won for our country a new supremacy on the seas. They broke up Great Britain's monopoly in the East Indian trade in the face of spirited British competition.

Again in the Civil War the American merchant marine was an effective factor in the contribution of sea power toward the winning of that conflict. Many merchant ships were converted into men of war. Others were destroyed or sold abroad.

After the Civil War, the development of the West was the great national goal. Our merchant marine began to decline until the Great War found the United States dangerously weak upon the seas. In fact, at the beginning of that war less than 10 per cent of what America produced and bought was carried in ships flying the American flag.

Senator Recalls War Problems

SENATOR WHITE, of Maine, who has probably done more during his service in the two houses of Congress to revive the American merchant marine than any other national legislator of the same period, recently gave this graphic account of Uncle Sam's predicament on the seas when Europe went to war in 1914:

"In 1914 this country had but 17 ships in its overseas trade. The balance of our commerce overseas moved under foreign flags.

"We found ourselves able to move only those commodities foreign belligerants chose to take. As a consequence foreign rates moved to unprecedented and extortionate heights.

"Our farmers, manufacturers and importers paid tribute of untold millions in carrying charges and our country suffered the humiliation of commercial impotence."

This brought home to the American people once more the indispensable necessity of a strong merchant marine. Then started the war program of ship building. The result was that at the close of the war and in the years that followed, the American government, through the shipping board, established 38 services to world ports with the ships built during the war. These ships were built for war purposes. They were not designed for peace-time trade.

New Decline Takes Place

AND soon the merchant marine started on a new decline which continued from 1921 until the Jones-White act was passed in 1928. During that period the great maritime powers of Europe were outbuilding us on the seas—some of them more than fourteen to one.

With the passage of the Jones-White act of 1928 a loan system of federal aid for American shipbuilding and American shipyards was established. This new policy quickly revived the merchant marine.

By 1933 our merchant marine, although faced with increasing foreign competition and hard hit by the depression, was nevertheless going forward. American shipping service was in operation from 60 American ports to 550 foreign and overseas ports.

What was obviously needed was a reorganization of the shipping board and a more intelligent and efficient administration of the legislation of 1928. Many of our merchant ships were either obsolete or nearing the age limit. The building of new ships was an obvious necessity.

But the Department of Commerce, to which the development of our merchant marine was entrusted a year ago by executive order, is still dodging the constructive action required. After a year's delay it is now attempting to hide its inaction by the appointment of a new committee to "study the situation."

In no part of the federal government today is the leadership of action, which only President Roosevelt can raise up, more needed than in the modernizing and development of the American merchant marine.

Human Side of the News

Weather Makes News and Means Life to Many—Hottest and Coldest Places on Earth

By Edwin C. Hill

OVER wide areas of the granary of America, a savage sun has scorched and shriveled the very life out of the soil. Relentless Nature, man's eternal enemy, accomplishes in few days what the wonder boys of Washington failed to do in many months, boost the price of wheat to a dollar.

Day after day, in some tortured regions, the red tube of the thermometer showed a hundred and five or six, and the air was like the sirocco that sweeps across the Mediterrean from the Sahara and makes life miserable for folks in Spain. All of which emphasizes again and very dramatically the important part weather plays in the lives of most of us.

Weather is always news. Sometimes it is by far the biggest news in the papers. Sometimes it means the comfort, happiness and the very lives of thousands of people. Weather records are noted and kept with almost as much sporting interest as is attached to the home run records of Babe Ruth or the golf scores of Johnny Goodman or Paul Runyon.

And there are some very curious and interesting facts about these records—about the strange things and pranks that weather accomplishes here and there on this spinning ball we call the earth.

Generally speaking, the hottest weather on earth is not found near the equator, but prevails, during the summer season, in the great desert areas near the Tropics of Cancer and Capricorn. But it is by no means impossible that the hot weather championship will some day go to a place in the southern hemisphere, perhaps the interior of Australia.

Azizia Gets Hottest Heat

THE present highest on record is 136 degrees Fahrenheit at Azizia, Tripolitania. There is much less uncertainty about the temperature of 134 degress registered in July, 1913, on the border of the Death Valley, 178 feet below sea level and in the midst of a large desert region that has always been notorious for excessive summer heat. So Charles Fitzhugh Talman tells us, along with many other odd facts, in an article in Nature Magazine.

The worst hot spells in Death Valley occur when the intensely heated air from the higher desert drifts down into the valley and there undergoes further heating by compression. This place has also the lightest known rainfall in the country, averaging only 1.45 inches a year. Both Azizia and Death Valley are cool in winter.

Turning to the opposite extremes of temperature, it may be said that the world's coldest weather probably occurs where there is nobody to take the temperature. We can be reasonably sure that it does not occur at Verkhoyansk, in North-Central Siberia, that has long enjoyed the reputation of being the "winter cold pole" of the globe.

The official weather station at this place has registered 90 degrees below zero and some believe it is really 94 degrees below. But in Siberia there is a place said to be colder even than Verkhoyansk, 400 miles southeast of Verkhoyansk and well inside the temperate zone. Stories of the terrific cold at Oimekon—more than 100 degrees below—have long been current in Siberia.

Mountain Top Has Cold Record

THERE is, however, every reason to believe that the coldest winter weather in the world prevails on the summit of some lofty mountain, possibly at the top of Mount Nilsen, fifteen thousand feet above sea level in the interior of the Antarctic continent.

It has been calculated that a temperature of 130 degrees below zero is possible on the summit of the great Greenland ice cap. An actual thermometer reading much lower than any ever obtained at Verkhoyansk, was obtained under romantic circumstances on a lofty slope of Mount McKinley, in Alaska.

When the late Arch-deacon Hudson Stuck climbed this highest of North American mountains in 1913, he cached on Parker Pass, at an altitude of fifteen thousand feet, an accurate minimum thermometer graduated down to 93 below zero.

Nineteen years later, in May of last year, Stuck's thermometer was found by another climbing party. Its index had gone beyond the lowest graduation of the scale and was projecting into the bulb, indicating a minimum temperature of at least 100 degrees below zero.

The rainiest place on the globe is Cherrapunji in the Khasi Hills of Assam. It lies four thousand, one hundred feet above sea level.

The driest known place in the world is Arica, Chile, with an average rainfall of only .02 inch, from a seventeen year record. During all that period there were only three measurable showers.

The heaviest twenty-four hour rainfall on record was forty-six inches and occurred in July, 1911, at Baguio, the mountain health resort in the Philippines.

The Magic of True Love

By Winifred Black

SO THE actor married the invalid and he is taking care of her, and it begins to look as if she wouldn't be be an invalid very much longer.

Not when she has something to live for, and someone who really loves her to take care of her.

And the actor is as happy as a king, or a good deal happier than most kings have time to be.

And the invalid—well, they say you ought to see her. She's beginning to revive like a faded rose when you put it in good, clean, fresh water. She reads and she sings and she waits for her husband to come home and when he does come they talk and laugh and sometimes they sing together, and you'd think they were a bride and groom in the early twenties just to hear them.

And they're not in the early twenties at all. They're in the middle thirties, old enough to know what they want and have sense enough to get it in their own way without asking the advice of any doctor or nurse or interfernig friends in the world.

Well, there's nothing so very strange about that.

Didn't Robert Browning, the big, handsome, magnetic Browning, snatch delicate little Elizabeth Barret up from her invalid couch and carry her away and make her happy ever after?

Why I know a handsome, magnetic chap about 40 years old. When he was 25 he was not much in the way of health or of success either, if you came down to that. He just didn't seem to make the grade somehow.

The girls were all in love with him, but he didn't care much for girls anyhow.

Well, one day he married a woman 16 years older that he was and a very plain, not at all interesting woman at that.

He said she reminded him of his mother, and nobody could think what on earth he meant.

But he married her and she took care of him, she fed him, read with him and she walked with him, and she believed in him and she bossed him and he began to perk up and take an interest in life and he found a good job and kept it until he found a better one.

Now they have a nice little home and a bit of money in the bank and he's doing well when most of the other fellows of his age are not having any particular luck at money making and they're as happy as clams at high water.

That young man's cousin married when he was about 25. He married a beauty and she was a very sweet girl as well as a beauty. He left her in less than a year.

He's been married twice since then and twice since then he has been divorced.

Both of the other two wives were nice girls and pretty girls and intelligent girls.

How do I explain it?

Dear me, I wouldn't think of even trying to explain it.

I'm just telling you about it.

You explain it — won't you? Please.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

The Sweet and Lowdown

The husband of the average celebrity is a vague, nebulous, semi-detached person, who appears beside his glittering wife at brilliant parties and then just gracefully fades out of the picture.

Lots of lawyers are kept working overtime these days, soldering up broken hearts with gold. This will go down in history as "the heart-balm decade."

* * *

Marriage should never be monotonous. A bachelor finds all women in the same gracious mood—but a married man gets the benefit of ALL a woman's moods and never knows what fresh surprise is going to be sprung on him.

* * *

Add similes: As secretive as the attendant who answers the club telephone, when the wives begin calling up.

* * *

Even when a woman loses all her other interests in life, she can still fill in the time by worrying about her weight or what to do with her hair. But, by that time, a man can think of nothing to get excited about, except what-the-country-is-coming-to.

* * *

A lot of money can buy a man almost anything—even his wife's respect for his bath-tub carols and his razor blades.

* * *

Some men love their wives devotedly, some comfortably, some sub-consciously—and some intermittently.

* * *

Idolize a man, and he'll tolerate you; make a chum of him, and he'll like you; make a fool of him, and—through some strange quirk of masculine perversity—he'll keep on your trail until he marries you.

Oh yes, there were two sexes even away back in the gay nineties, but nobody thought to feature the fact; so everybody accepted it as a matter of course.

* * *

If a woman were given only three minutes to live, she would spend at least two of them in touching up her makeup.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Love's Crown

Nothing of this did you speak, O, my love,
When you came my way;
Only your voice was the voice of a dove
And your words were gay.
Laughter was light on your lips, and the east
Showed the sky all blue;
Garlands you wove me for life's waiting feast
When I went with you!

Nothing of this, O, my love, did you tell,
And I tremble now;
Strangely the winds to a tempest swell
And the creaking bough
Splinters and falls in the gusts of life
That are swooping down;
Yet, how is it your garlands frail
Have become a crown?
